HAPPY CHRISTMAS FOR POOR OF CITY IS GOAL OF ARMY

American Legion Leads Heads of State, County and City in Effort To Provide Cheer for Poverty-Stricken Families.

GREAT RESPONSE BELIEVED CERTAIN

We Cannot Fail Our Own in Hours of Stress, Heads of Great Campaign Declare.

Six hundred Big Brothers, with their hearts determined to help every needy family enjoy a brighter Christmas Day this year because of them, will take the field this morning to sell Atlanta's special Big Brother edition of The Constitution.

They will make their appeal for aid at every house and generous Atlantans will respond liberally because the need to drive away gloom and darkness in the bleak hours of unfortunate mothers and fathers who cannot raise money enough to give their children a real Christmas is greater than ever before.

Big Brothers are going to help twice as many of these poor children and desperate parents this year than last and they are counting on your support to aid them in their battle.

The forces of the Big Brother army, which is today fighting for a Christmas fund to make thousands of persons happier this year, have been marshaled into units which will work with clock-like precision in covering the city today with their special Big Brother papers.

The Constitution and the Atlanta Post No. 1, American Legion, who are sponsoring the second annual Big Brothers campaign for Christmas cheer, have appealed to Atlan-tans to buy these papers and to pay liberally for them. The sponsors are confident thousands of dollars will be raised this morning, because the generosity of the citizens of Atlanta has never failed when a worthy cause has called upon it.

The Big Brothers' army is a large one this year, more than twice the size of the group of valiant men and women who sold the Big Brother papers last year, and then made the

YEOMANS POINTS TO VITAL MENACE OF SCREW WORM

Insufficient Funds Hamper War on Insect Pest, Declares State Entomologist, Launching Campaign

A campaign of education to teach Georgians how to combat the screw worm is advocated by M. S. Yeomans, state entomologist who has been leading the fight on the new and deadly insect pest ever since it was first discovered in Georgia in July, 1933.

Pointing to the widespread infestation that now exists, Mr. Yeomans says he does not believe the insect, which destroys all warm-blooded animals, can be totally eradicated, but he does believe that, with an intensive campaign to teach all farmers how to fight it, it will be possible to save the livestock industry in Georgia from extinction.

He also points to a number of cases where humans have been victims of the new screw worm and declares his belief that when the final survey is complete more than a hundred cases of human victims of the pest will be reported.

No, however deadly or dreadful, no conquer Americans, Yeomans said Saturday as he set forth his views on the great danger to the livestock industry in Georgia and other southern states which has resulted from a widespread infestation of the screw worm throughout the southern portion of this state.

"American men with money and brains have been able to eradicate every insect which became a menace or have been able to devise ways and means of living with it," asserted Mr. Yeomans, who for the last two years has been directing the campaign against the screw worm in Georgia.

It has been impossible, however, for the work to progress in proportion to the ravages of the pest due

AGED FIRE VICTIM LEAVES $50,000 TO CHURCH HERE

Will of Miss Elizabeth Trice, Believed To Be Poverty-Stricken, To Be Opened Monday.

The will of Miss Elizabeth Trice, 82-year-old recuse, who was burned to death in the fire of her old-fashioned home early Friday morning at 113 Alexander street, N. W., when opened Monday morning in the office of Fulton Ordinary Thomas H. Jeffries, will reveal that the aged woman's estate of more than $50,000, had been bequeathed in full to various institutions of the Seventh Day Adventist church, of which she was a devoted member and to which she had been a liberal contributor.

In the will Miss Trice set out the names of her various brothers and sisters and related that she knew nothing of the whereabouts of her brothers and sisters, who she had not seen for many years.

She appended to the will the statement that she had made all of the money she was leaving through her own efforts and further stipulated that it should be used to further the work of her church, the work nearest to her heart.

One of the first items in the will instructs that one-tenth of her property be given to the foreign mission board of the church, which she was a devoted member and to which she had been a liberal contributor.

Another item in the will stipulated the arrangements for her funeral. Her funeral church workers were instructed to buy a six-foot casket for her. In the remaining five spaces, Adventists unable to afford plots were to be buried.

The Rev. H. E. Lysinger, 225 Atlanta avenue, S. E., president of the Seventh Day Adventist church of the city, was named in the will as the administrator of the estate.

More than $50,000 of the estate is not invested in loans and to the Seventh Day Adventist church at 4 per cent interest. This money, it was said, will be used in the re-education of the church and in the work of the church.

Among the various bequests was one for $10,000 for the church's evangelistic work in the southeast; another for $10,000 for the sick fund administered by the Southeastern Unitarian conference of the church. A special fund of $500 was set aside for the Atlanta church to use in the work.

The safety deposit box in which Miss Trice kept her valuables was opened Saturday in the presence of five witnesses. It was bulging with valuable papers. There was a sheaf of Liberty bonds from which the coupons had not been clipped. In a corner of the box was a mound of old but valuable jewelry and a collection of valuable old coins, the face value of which was said to amount to about $35.

Beneath the assortment of papers, stocks, bonds, jewelry and old coins was the will which in a circuitous way gave a more vivid picture of the thoughts and actions of the mysterious recuse than had been advanced by her neighbors and friends.

Few persons knew Miss Trice intimately. Fewer still had ever crossed the threshold of her home. She responded only to prearranged signal knocks on her front door and then would talk to the visitor on the front porch of her home. Until the fire.

Canon Youth Sought In Slaying of Man

CANON, Ga., Dec. 15.—Franklin county officers and a large posse of citizens are seeking the arrest of Woodrow Strickland, 23, charged with robbery and then stabbing to death
James Haynie, 70, near here Friday afternoon. The crime was described as one of the most brutal ever committed in this section.

According to reports, Haynie and Strickland were walking down a road near here and while passing through a swamp, Haynie was robbed of $21 by Strickland, who then stabbed two boys reported that Strickland told them of the alleged robbery and killing and of offering them some of the money.

Officers located Strickland in a farmhouse near the scene of the crime and while attempting to handcuff him, Strickland broke away and escaped, with the handcuffs attached to one arm. Officers and citizens continued the search today.

Haynie was a highly respected citizen of Canon and Strickland a native of this place. He recently returned here from North Carolina.

Just Because

You are now reading a copy of The Constitution is no reason why you shouldn't buy another from the Big Brother who will call at your door.

Give yourself the luxury of a whole paper for once in a lifetime.

Get yourself a paper for your very own, one that the wife doesn't take the society section out of right away... one that little sister doesn't snitch the comics from before brother gets the sports section.
A happy thought... get a whole paper for once for every member of the family.

And Give Some Poor Kid the luxury of a toy, an apple, an orange, a stick of candy and some poor

ATLANTA MAN, 43, BEATEN TO DEATH

Head Crushed, Is Found Near Mountain View.

His head brutally beaten in with a rock, the body of a man identified as Joe H. Shelor, 43, of 488 Capitol avenue, was discovered in a ditch near Mountain View Saturday morning.

A coroner's jury at Jonesboro returned a verdict that the man had come to his death at the hands of a person or persons unknown.

Papers in his pockets, from which identification was made by Hapeville
Policeman F. S. French and Sheriff
E. L. Adamson, of Clayton county, showed that Shelor was wanted on a criminal assault charge in Richmond, Va., and that he had been in an insane asylum in Baltimore, Md. The officers said Shelor, known also as "R. H. Shelor," was killed by a man, who had been by the side of the road and eaten walnuts with him.

The body was found by a farmer named Starr, who notified Hapeville Police.

SPECIAL SESSION CALLED BY LONG IN UTILITIES 'WAR'

21 General Subjects of Legislation To Be Handled; Another Five-Day Session Forecast.

BATON ROUGE, La., Dec. 15.—
(AP)—Huey Long today ordered more laws for his dictatorship and his political ally, Governor O. K. Allen, immediately called the legislature into extraordinary session for tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

And, said the dictator of the third special session of 1934, "the legislature may need a little money for Christmas."

The call for the session, issued just before noon, enumerated 21 general subjects of legislation to be handled within a 12-day limit, but politicians said the time would be withheld down to five days if all went well and a new batch of bills would be passed in the minimum legal time as in the last two sessions when the 30th new law for 1934 was written on the statutes.

Outstanding among the items of call was No. 9, regulating "powers, duties and authority of the Louisiana public service commission and for revenues thereof."

More Power.
This was interpreted as more power for the public service commission in its investigation of rates of the utilities which Long says are "too high."

The pre-Christmas program to be acted into law by the time the senator leaves for Washington to re-introduce his tax on capital wealth in congress, including:

1. To regulate the sale of intoxicating liquors.
2. To amend, amend or repeal laws providing for revenue, licenses and fees.
3. To amend laws relative to Louisiana State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College.
4. To provide for expansion and betterments of Louisiana State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College.

5. To relieve property owners from excessive costs of charges levied or to be levied upon him for street paving.

Relative to public schools and school boards.
7. To authorize special counsel by and for the state and its departments and to provide for their compensation.
Relative to municipal corporations.

9. Powers, duties and authority of the Louisiana public service commission and for revenues thereof.
10. Authority of state and departments of state to borrow money and repeal same directly or through board of liquidation of the state debt.

11. To provide additional funds for Louisiana state employment service.
12. Relative to assessors and rendition of assessments and the conduct of their offices and work of assessments and to provide funds for the Louisiana tax commission.

13. Relative to pensions and hiring, discharge and changing of salaries and wages of persons in private employment who are eligible, prospects or in the list of those who may become prospects or eligible to draw pensions.

14. Amending the act relative to the Louisiana state bar.

15. Relative to coroners of parishes.
16. Appointment and election of public officers.

17. Powers, duties, authorities and revenues for state service municipal boards and departments thereof.

18. Relative to powers, duties and authority of the board of commissioners of the Orleans levee district.

19. To amend and re-enact act No.
128 of 1930.

20. Relative to the enforcement of the law and the employment and appointment of peace officers by all boards, departments and offices of the state, parishes and municipalities.

21. To provide that every domestic and foreign corporation authorized or qualified to do business in this state, shall keep and maintain at its principal office in this state, an adequate and correct set of books on its Louisiana business; and to provide penalties for failure to comply with this act.

Washington Termed 'Worst Legging Spot'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—(AP)—
Washington, was termed the country's "worst" bootlegging "spot" tonight by Ammon McCellan, executive director of the League of Discilled Spirits Rectifiers.

Before the Federation of Citizens' Associations, McCellan said "the man in the green hat"—yes, and men in gray, brown, black and even derbies are peddling liquor down the corridors of the senate and house office buildings and even in the capitol building proper."

INSULL QUIZ BARES 'FALSE VALUATION'

'Rusty Junk' and 'Piles of Brick' Listed at $3,000,000, Says White.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Testimony that nearly worthless property was carried at fictitious values amounting to millions of dollars on the books of the United Public Service Company, a $50,000,000 Insull subsidiary, was disclosed today in a special master in chancery's report filed with Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley.

Transcripts of the testimony of Samuel W. White, equity receiver for the concern, said the books listed at $3,000,000 property consisting principally of "rusty junk" and "piles of brick."

The report quoted White as testifying: "Under the most favorable conditions that had ever obtained since the company was formed—the underlying property could not reasonably have been expected to support the existing capitalization of those companies."

The companies referred to were the United Public Utilities, a subsidiary of Middle West Utilities, main Insull holding concern; United Public Utilities and Southern United Gas Company, controlled by United Public Service, and 29 public utility operating concerns in the Midwest which were in turn controlled by Southern United Gas and United Public Utilities.

White testified that assets items aggregating millions of dollars were carried "with no possible justification." Reference was made to an ice plant in Memphis, Tenn., which never operated, as having been carried at a value of $600,000.

United Public Service and through it Middle West Utilities, White testified, "received income that could not properly have been distributed by their subsidiaries if they had maintained a policy of conservative accounting and adequate provisions for depreciation and depletion." Immediately after he was appointed receiver, White testified,

'Efficiency Brains' Of U. S. Workers Gain

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—(AP)—

The American industrial worker was shown by authoritative government data today to have increased his efficiency brains 10 to 25 per cent since 1920.

This efficiency, largely attributed to improvements in operating methods instead of to the introduction of new machines, means that the average worker now needs almost a quarter less time to do his job. Interpretations of the efficiency gain vary, but a consensus of government economists indicated there was little fear but that most of the labor released by this increased ability would be absorbed in a normal production and business period with little difficulty.

An important labor economist estimated privately that approximately 2,500,000 less workers would be needed today to carry the nation on its 1929 production level—indicating that some 46,000,000 or 47,000,000 could do the job today that 48,000,000 to 49,000,000 did in 1929 and 1930.

Roaring Steel Mills Presage Happier Yule

CLEVELAND, Dec. 15.—(UP)—

"Merry Christmas" for northern Ohio steel workers was written tonight in the crimson glare from a thousand mill stacks.

Production will soar to new peaks next week. Pay envelopes will be fatter. They will reach more men. For industrialist and mill hand alike, the outlook is brighter.

Men are pouring steel again on a big scale.

In some districts, operations will be 100 per cent of capacity. Hundreds of additional men will be given employment. Extra mills were warmed up in anticipation of the year's most active period.

In general, 1935 automobile production was responsible for the step-up.

White testified that the firm's system of accounting.

The result, White testified, of an apparent attempt to "show earnings greater than possible under conservative accounting standards" was that "the company was saddled with debts in order to continue interest and dividends on securities sold to the public in excessive amounts."

MAIS ELUDES CAPTURE DESPITE POLICE TRAP

Virginia Fugitive Sought in Probe of Weiss' Abduction.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 15.—(AP)—

The trail of Robert Mais grew colder today but police continued an unrelenting hunt for the fugitive killer whose gang they say can explain the disappearance of William Weiss, night life figure, who was abducted seven weeks ago.

Mais and two confederates shot their way out of a trap Thursday night and he was reported seen in West Philadelphia last night. Police found his hideout, however, and a raid there netted several arrests as well as an extensive array of firearms.

A little child led them, unwittingly, to the hideout, the police disclosed. Gladys Wilkinson, 6, one of three children of Mrs. Beatrice Wilkinson, told a schoolmate "I'm scared to go home. The men at our house carry guns and there's guns in the house."

Gladys playmate told her father, the father told Matthew H. Clark, lieutenant of detectives. When a squad raided the North Philadelphia house Mrs. Wilkinson was arrested along with Charles Zell, wanted in connection with the slaying of a Camden detective, and Frank Wiley, escaped convict.

Two more persons, Robert Eckard and his wife, were taken into custody today and questioned. More than 50 persons viewed them but police would make no comment. They also had nothing further to say about the belief expressed yesterday that Weiss was killed and thrown into the Delaware river.

Sewanee Cadets Here for Yule

MAJOR, COMPTROLLER STUDY SEWER PROJECT

Officials Agree That Maximum Tax Levy Would Be Unnecessary.

Mayor James L. Key and City Comptroller R. Graham West Saturday studied the bill to establish a metropolitan sewer district for Fulton and DeKalb counties.

West and the mayor agreed that levy of the proposed maximum of one cent for each 100 gallons of water used would not be needed, and that only about half of the maximum would provide ample funds to procure federal aid, retire bonds which might be issued and to maintain the system.

The bonds would be sufficient to provide $1,500,000 during next year for materials for construction of large trunk lines and also to establish disposal plants.

Councilman J. Frank Beck, of the eighth ward, who was in Key's office at the time, concurred in the opinion that the levy on the basis of water used would "be the most equitable way to raise the funds."

Key suggests that persons living outside the city limits but who use city water should be charged on the basis of their water bill and not on the amount of water used, because they pay no city taxes.

Under the bill a board of nine trustees would be set up, three of whom would be from DeKalb county, three from Fulton, the mayor of Atlanta and the chairman of the DeKalb and Fulton county commissioners.

Watch That Old House Change Into a HOME Before Your Eyes!

Magical Improvement May Be Made With Little Cost

Remodeling House to Suit Own Taste Found to Be Most Fascinating Experience as Well as Soundest Investment.

The magical and startlingly pleasing effects achieved by the transformation of an old-fashioned, inconveniently-arranged house into a charming, distinctive, up-to-date home is almost limitless in its possibilities—and in most cases it is a very simple process.

Every family wants an attractive home. And now, with the co-operation of the United States Government under the National Housing Act the means are provided. Any home owner whose integrity is assured and whose income is regular can easily secure the money. It is astounding what a difference just a few dollars will make in your home—in appearance, in convenience, in comfort and in increased value, as hundreds of Atlanta people have already learned.

Repairing and improving your home contributes to the happiness and prosperity of you and your family and of the entire community. It enhances the value of your property. It increases the joy of living and brings to you a satisfaction and contentment that can be gained in no other way. From every standpoint it pays to improve your property and to maintain it in perfect repair.

Since the National Housing Act began to operate scores upon scores of Atlanta people have learned how simple it is to secure a modernized home and how easy it is to get the money and to meet the payments. Many property owners have rented houses and stores long vacant as a result of repairing and improving with the assistance of the lending agencies and building material supply firms affiliated with the movement who are advertising on the page.

In all probability your house needs only a few little improvements here and there to beautify its exterior and make the interior up-to-date. Maybe it's a front entrance changed—a new door, perhaps, and modern door hardware.

An inviting porch added. An old porch converted into a cozy sun room. An old exterior shingled, or changed to brick or stucco. Windows added or enlarged to permit more sunlight and afford better ventilation. The old, harsh lines of the roof changed and softened into the pleasing lines of modern architecture and enduring beauty.

Your house may be very old or slightly out-of-date. It may need only a very few changes or it may need many. It may only need a few repairs and a coat of paint or it may be in a bad state of repair and require much to be done to restore its comfort, safety and value. But, whatever is needed you can borrow through the Government's guarantee from $100 to $2,000. You can do much or little to suit your own requirements and your own income. But whatever improvements you do make will return to you a hundred fold in increased value and joy of living.

Join the enthusiastic Atlanta throng and watch that old house of yours change into a modern home before your very eyes. It is the most fascinating experience in life—that of remodeling and modernizing your home to suit your own tastes and desires.

If YOUR HOME NEEDS MODERNIZING, OR IS MERELY IN NEED OF REPAIR

Assembly Must Make Plans For Paying Off State Deficit

LOCAL FIRM TO ASSUME CONTROL OF AD AGENCY

By arrangement with the Fitzgerald Advertising Agency of New Orleans, Gottschaldt-Humphrey, Inc. of Atlanta, will on January 1 take over the personnel and business of the Fitzgerald Atlanta office. Bruce Moran, who is manager of the Fitzgerald Atlanta office, and Miss A. M. Gippert, his assistant, will continue to handle these accounts and will become a part of the Gottschaldt-Humphrey organization. This move is said to create the largest organization of its kind in this section of the United States, with personnel whose combined experience covers virtually every major field of industrial and commercial activity and whose executives have been associated with many of the outstanding accounts that have been developed in this region.

The Gottschaldt-Humphrey organization is rounding out its 13th year in Atlanta, existing since for nearly 12 of his 20 years experience. Coming to the south from New York, where he was connected with the planning days of many of America's present leading concerns, Mr. Moran rapidly became a factor in the growth of southern advertising, and has been associated with many of the more ambitious operations which have taken place during that time. In 1932 he left his own advertising agency to assume management of the Fitzgerald office which now becomes a part of the Gottschaldt-Humphrey concern.

Mr. Moran, known particularly for his work on community advertising, is reported to be the outstanding southern authority on the merchandising of real estate and other types of business. He has been closely connected in recent years with major food accounts.

"Mr. Moran was for three years governor of the Atlanta district of the Advertising Federation of America, has long been on the board of the Atlanta Advertising Club. He is a director of the Atlanta Civic Club, and chairman of the public committee for the Federal Housing Campaign in Atlanta.

Miss A. M. Gippert brings to the organization 12 years of advertising experience. She was for five years assistant to Ray E. Bowen, advertising director of the New York magazine, prior to that was for a number of years with advertising agencies in the east and here, and has been with the Fitzgerald Atlanta office since its inception.

"The addition to our organization of such associates as Mr. Moran and Miss Gippert," said Mr. Gottschaldt, "is bound to make our agency a great deal to the clients our agency is permitted to serve. We feel they round out our organization in splendid fashion and will enable us to operate more effectively than ever before on all phases of marketing, merchandising and advertising."

"Speaking for the Fitzgerald Atlanta personnel," said Mr. Moran, "I am tremendously pleased with the facilities brought to our clients by this move. We have known the Gottschaldt-Humphrey personnel for many years, and have respected them as able, intelligent and conscientious craftsmen. It is a privilege to work with them, and to become part of their efficient, constructive organization."

Among the unusual features of Gottschaldt-Humphrey service to its clients is the complete, on-the-ground merchandising service which has been developed over a period of years. Recognizing the importance of such activities, Gottschaldt-Humphrey, Inc., has working arrangements with other leading advertising agencies in such strategic centers as New York, Philadelphia, Rochester, Buffalo, St. Paul, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Paris and London.

The principal business will be the fixing of salaries of employees for the new year. Department heads, whose salaries have already been set at the 1934 figures, were notified to submit salary lists by December 15, but Saturday the sheriff was the only one who had complied with the request. Others are expected to hand in their lists by Wednesday. In his report, Sheriff J. L. Lowry asked for general increases in the salaries of the members of his staff.

Keller F. Melton, Georgia FERA director of safety, said that while in Atlanta Wherry will be expected to interview Governor Talmadge regarding a license law for automobile drivers in this state.

Miss Gay B. Shepperson, Georgia relief administrator, and Mayor James L. Key are listed as feature speakers at the rally.

Diversion of $2,000,000 in Highway Funds to Meet Portion of Past-Due Obligations.

By BEN F. MEYER.
Associated Press Staff Writer.
A campaign promise of Governor Eugene Talmadge to pay up the state's debts within the next two years has given state financial experts a tough job.

In these days, even the state of Georgia can't pick up a matter of $3,383,000 just anywhere.

By reason of another campaign promise to divert $2,000,000 in highway funds for common schools and Confederate pensioners—the governor gave the financial workers something to start on, but that other $3,383,000 is giving them a headache.

Laws prescribe where much of the state's revenues must go, and a new complication has arisen in a study of the congressional appropriation of highway funds. This appropriation flows on diversion by the state of highway funds.

As construed here, the federal law says Uncle Sam will, beginning in July, 1935, trim his highway allocations in proportion to the amount the states pass new highway diversion measures. The federal funds can be trimmed up to 30 per cent. This is construed here to mean that Georgia must do its diverting before July, or else lose an amount equal to its diversion. And with state finances as they are, no one relishes the thought of losing federal money.

The state's debt is composed of these items of unpaid appropriations: Public schools, $2,736,158; Pensions, $531,600; Eleemosynary institutions, $145,713; University System of Georgia, $629,178.

Milledgeville prison, $5,348. In addition there is the treasury deficit of $1,314,993 which, with the unpaid appropriations, makes up the total debt, not including bonded debt for which regular provision is made.

The old treasury deficit represents the remaining unpaid portion of the capital made back in the late twenties which has been, in effect, carried over on the books from year to year.

To pay its bills, the state has this year increased its highway funds, and scraped up the remainder of the then-outstanding loan so the state would not have to keep on paying interest. But it still is a deficit, because the money must be repaid to the highway department some day.

A number of possible sources of finding the remaining $3,383,000 of the total debt have been surveyed by the governor and others at the capitol. Just where the money is to come from is a secret just now, since no fixed program has been agreed upon. One source would be to decline to discuss it, saying it is, after all, the governor's business to find the way.

With the legislature's help, the governor is expected to formulate some plan for paying up the debt.

The legislature has the final say. Various suggestions for raising the money have been advanced by some members of the general assembly, but these are "out" as the governor said he would pay off the debt without raising taxes. Governor Talmadge is expected to have the legislature lined up fairly solidly behind his program, by reason of the fact that he campaigned for reelection on his legislative program.

Mill Asks Dismissal Of Back Pay Petition

Based on a similar case which the United States court of appeals in New Orleans held to be beyond its jurisdiction, attorneys for the Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills asked Saturday for a dismissal of the petition of 30 former employees seeking to recover back pay and enjoy their former employment from the date of their dismissal. Although taking the case under consideration, Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood said he could probably be bound by the opinion of the other judges, holding the case not to be within his jurisdiction.

The original petition filed last week charged violation of section 7-A of the National Recovery Act governing collective bargaining of employees. The federal court, at its recent decision held that private parties cannot seek to enforce this clause, but action must come through the attorney general's office. Judge Underwood said he would render decision on the case within a few days.

YEOMANS POINTS TO VITAL MENACE OF SCREW WORM

to the totally inadequate funds available.

At a recent meeting the heads of eight separate state bureaus and federal officials agreed to co-ordinate their work of control in order to present a harmonious and effective fighting force to bring the devastation of the screw worm under control.

Starting with one case reported from Bartow, Fla., in July, 1933, by the end of the year approximately 75,000 cases of infestation were on record, and a survey as of December disclosed the astounding fact that more than 500,000 animals were infested in 1934.

Educational Work Needed. Although two-thirds of the counties of the state have already been invaded by the pest, Mr. Yeomans says that he believes that its ravages can be brought under control when livestock owners know how to care for their stock. This will require an extensive campaign of education conducted by trained workers, who will instruct livestock men, farmers and tenants in the use of preventive measures as well as actual treatment of infested animals.

Mr. Yeomans points out that in past years the federal government has spent huge sums in combating pests such as the Mediterranean fruit fly, the gypsy moth, European corn borer and a dozen or more other insects that have threatened agricultural prosperity in America, and asserts that ample precedence having been established, Georgia can justifiably ask the federal government to assist in the fight on this dangerous menace to animal life.

The treatment of newly infested animals, as outlined by Mr. Yeomans, is so simple and inexpensive that even the most ignorant tenant would have no difficulty in applying it. After years of experiments in Texas, where the screw worm has been active for some time, federal officials recommend an application of benzol to kill the maggots, and oil of pine tar applied afterward to cover the wound while it is healing to prevent further infestation.

Preliminary Work Urged. Valuable preliminary work can be done this winter, he says, in the building of hospital pens throughout the infested territory, so that they will be ready for use when the fly, which lays the eggs, becomes active next spring. "During my 10 years' connection with the department of entomology," said Mr. Yeomans, "we have had many new insects and diseases to appear in the state, but I have never before seen as much active interest by people in all walks of life as has been manifested in the recent appearance of the screw worm in Georgia. To those of us who have been dealing with insects and diseases for a long number of years, the interest is phenomenal."

In every case where a new insect or disease appears, we have been confronted with the statements that this new disease or insect has been present for a long number of years or else did not amount to anything. I have as yet (and I have discussed the screw worm situation with people from all walks of life and from every section of the state) to be confronted with the statement that the screw worm which is causing so much damage in the state at the present time has been here for a long number of years and did not or would not amount to anything.

"I have found that the best way to determine the real damage that any given insect or disease is causing is not to discuss the matter with the experts, but to talk with the farmer who is affected and get his opinion. The farmers of the state say that the screw worm has caused them very severe losses."

Two Species of Worms.

There are two species of screw worms in this state—Cochliomyia macellaria and Cochliomyia americana. Cochliomyia macellaria has been known for a long number of years and attacks mainly dead animals or dead flesh but will, on occasions, attack living animals, mainly when the animal has a festered sore or something of this nature. Cochliomyia americana is a new species which was determined last winter and is a true parasite, attacking mainly only living warm-blooded animals, such as cattle, hogs, horses, mules, sheep, goats, dogs, other domestic and wild animals and man. The damage which this insect has caused and will cause to the wild life on the back between the wings and a reddish-yellow face. The adult lays her eggs in wounds on animals, such as barbed-wire cuts, scratches from the back of the head, ticks, and other flies have nipped the animal, brand marks and wounds from dehorning, etc. A single female has been known to deposit over 1,200 eggs. The eggs hatch in a few hours and the maggots immediately begin burrowing through the flesh, tearing it and breaking it down and consuming the products. They grow very rapidly and may be three-fourths of an inch long in four or five days. The maggots when fully grown will drop out of the flesh and burrow into the soil or into a hole in the ground. Depending upon the weather, they emerge as flies after pupating from a few days to two weeks' time.

Infestation Spread Rapidly.

The new species, Cochliomyia americana, the true screw worm as it is sometimes known, was not known to exist in the state of Georgia until about the middle of July of last year, when several cases were found to be infested near Boston, Ga. By the end of the screw worm season, which is about November 15 in the southern part of Georgia, and November 1 in sections in the northern part of the state, infestations had shown up in 33 counties, with practically all types of warm-blooded animals having been attacked. There were approximately 75,000 cases in 1933. Representatives of the United States department of agriculture and the state agencies held meetings in practically each one of the infested counties and advised the farmers and other interested citizens the best way to fight the insect. Benzol to kill the maggots in the wounds and pine tar oil to heal the wounds and act as a repellent were recommended. These two materials are recommended by the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine of the United States department of agriculture after many years of research in which thousands of different materials were used. It was found that Benzol which can be purchased at approximately 35c a gallon and pine tar oil which can be purchased at approximately 25c a gallon were the best. Benzol would kill the screw worms within a very few minutes and would not injure the wound in any way and had no effect upon the animal. Pine tar oil caused the wound to heal very rapidly and at the same time prevented new infestations.

In 1934, the first case of screw worms was reported about May 13 near Hinesville, Ga., a section of the state not known to be generally infested in 1933. As the summer progressed, new infestations were reported in practically every section of the state except in the northern counties. Animals have been known to be infested in 120 counties in the state this year, with every county south of a line drawn directly across the state at the upper edge of Fulton being infested. There have been reports, however, from a few counties north of this line, but the reports were not official.

Questionnaire Sent Out.

Mr. Harry Brown, extension director of Georgia State College of Agriculture, forwarded a questionnaire to the county agents in the infested counties and, based on these reports, and from knowledge gained through other sources, there were approximately 500,000 animals infested with screw worms in Georgia in 1934.

"The new species, which attack humans as stated above, Dr. T. F. Abernethy, director of the Georgia board of health, is making a survey to determine the number of humans infested this year and the monthly report beginning October 27 and ending December 1, 1934, shows that 21 cases of humans being infested with screw worms have occurred in Georgia. I confidently believe that the number of cases in Georgia when this survey is completed will be a hundred or more. Case histories on seven humans being infested have been secured from Chatham county, and there is every reason to believe that a large number of human cases would be expected from other counties in the state, for the infestations of animals were greater in some of the other counties."

"The question has been asked as to whether or not the screw worm

500,000 Cases of Screw Worm in Georgia

The above map shows graphically the rapid spread of the screw worm in Georgia, where 500,000 cases of infested animals were discovered in a survey completed on December 1, last. The first case of screw worm was reported from Boston (marked with star on map) in Thomas county in July, 1933. Before the coming of cold weather that year the deadly insect destroyer had spread over an area shown by the heavy-shaded portion of the map below the lower black line. At that time 75,000 cases were reported. In 1934, between January 1 and December 1, the scourge had spread over the area marked with dots, up to the second black line, and had at the same time become much more intense in south Georgia. A total of 500,000 cases was reported in the state as of December 1, last. Every expert who has studied the insect, its ravages and its spread, says with certainty unless some drastic weapon, as yet undiscovered, can be used at once the pest will complete its invasion of Georgia soon after the return of warm weather next spring, with the result that there won't be a single "white," uninfested county in the state, and the new plague will be spreading among the farm livestock of South Carolina, North Carolina and Tennessee. The above map and data furnished by the Georgia state bureau of entomology.

can be eradicated from Georgia, or if we will have to live with this pest forever. I do not see how screw worms can be eradicated from this state when we take into consideration that the insect is now in over two-thirds of the counties and that it will attack all types of wild life from the rabbit up to larger game. Then, too, we must take into consideration that South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas are now infested. It is true that other insects have been eradicated, but there were certain habits of the insect which assisted materially in its eradication. Unless some unforeseen climatic condition or something of a similar nature over which man himself has no control takes place, then I believe that this new species of screw worms is here to stay. Then it is a question of how long we can live with the insect. I am not willing to believe that the screw worm will completely destroy our live stock industry in this state. I think of no insect which has conquered American men, money and brains. We have been able to either eradicate the insect or else to devise ways and means to live with the insect. I think in the case of the screw worm that we have already devised ways and means to live with it and it is just a question of applying the knowledge.

Campaign Needed. "In my opinion, what we need for the forthcoming year is a very intensive and extensive educational campaign. I think that it would be extremely advisable to have a man who is competent to discuss screw worms and advise interested citizens of the state as to how best to combat this insect to be placed in each county or in the number of counties in which he can handle best and have him visit not only the owner of the land, but the tenants themselves, for the more people in the state who can recognize animals infested with screw worms, the better our chance will be for the reduction of the population of screw worms, thereby the reduction in the number of infested animals. There is ample evidence on which to base such campaign."

"The federal government should, and no doubt will, aid the state in its fight on this pest, for they have made appropriations for fights on other pests in other sections of the country. A recent appropriation to fight the Dutch elm disease in the northeastern states for $877,000 is called to my mind; congress appropriated $2,300,000 this year to fight the grasshoppers which menaced the crops of the farmers in the west and midwest; the government has spent over ten million dollars to fight the white pine blister rust in the United States; over fifty million dollars has been spent in a fight against the gypsy moth in the northeastern states by the state and federal governments; over six million dollars was spent by the government to eradicate the Mediterranean fruit fly from Florida, which threatened to destroy the citrus industry; large sums have been appropriated by the government to fight such pests as the Japanese beetle, Mexican fruit worm, hoof and mouth disease, European corn borer, date palm scale, pink bollworm and many other insects and diseases. Therefore, I think that ample precedents have been established and that Georgia could justifiably ask the federal government to assist us in our fight on this dangerous insect."

Need for Action Realized. "I have had two conferences already with Lee A. Strong, chief, bureau of entomology and plant quarantine, and I know that Mr. Strong is aware of the screw worm menace in this state and in the southeast and realizes the necessity for action next spring. I have a conference arranged for the first part of January with Mr. Strong and Dr. F. C. Bishop, who is in charge of the division of insects affecting man and animals. At that time, more than likely, a definite plan will be formulated. The question, however, has already been raised, as to the contribution by the state of Georgia, and an equitable share of the cost of the fight will be borne by some contribution. It should also be borne in mind that the federal government has the duty of protecting the states adjoining Georgia that are not now infested or generally infested. If the insect continues to spread as rapidly

SCREW WORM CONTROL.

By M. S. YEOMANS, State Entomologist of Georgia.

- THINGS TO DO:
- 1.—Provide a chute or brake, examine livestock for wounds and apply pine tar oil to them to prevent infestations of screw worms.
  - 2.—Have a small pasture near the house or watering place where animals infested with screw worms can be treated every day or two until the wounds are healed.
  - 3.—Use Benzol in wounds to kill screw worms and then apply pine tar oil to keep flies away and to promote healing.
  - 4.—When the location of wound or the value of the animal suggests it, obtain services of a competent veterinarian.
  - 5.—Burn carcasses of all animals.
  - 6.—Make all castrations and any other surgical operations after a killing frost so that they can heal before May 1.
  - 7.—Have all young dropped between November 1 and May 1.
- THINGS NOT TO DO:
- 1.—Do not use remedies containing coal tar, creosote or carbolic acid as these materials may result in serious consequences if not death of the animals.
  - 2.—Do not probe the wounds with sticks or rusty wire in efforts to get dead screw worms out of the wounds.
  - 3.—Do not ear mark, dehorn, castrate, or brand animals during warm weather. If it is absolutely necessary to make such operations, apply pine tar oil every day or two until the injuries are healed.
  - 4.—Do not depend on sprays to keep screw worm flies away from animals, nor dipping of animals to kill screw worms in wounds, nor fly traps to prevent infestations of animals.
  - 5.—Do not fail to see livestock at regular intervals.

The screw worm fly deposits eggs on wounds or abrasions of living animals. The eggs hatch in from six to ten hours and the young screw worms penetrate the flesh and feed on living tissues. In five to six days the screw worms complete their feeding and drop to the ground where they form the pupa stage. This resting stage lasts about six days and from it the adult fly emerges. Infestation of animals may be found through the summer from May to November.

TREATMENT.

The United States bureau of entomology and plant quarantine recommends the following treatment: Swab the wound with cotton to remove pus, blood and blood serum. Pour benzol (commercial 90 per cent) into the wound or inject it with a rubber bulb syringe. Plug the wound with cotton. Do not attempt to remove the worms from the wound by probing as this causes bleeding. Cover the wound with pine tar oil (specific gravity 1.065). Benzol and pine tar oil each cost about 40 cents per gallon in drum lots.

Long Aid Posts Bond On Tax Evasion Charge

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 15.—(P)—Seymour Weiss, political right-hand man of Senator Huey P. Long, who was indicted by the district federal grand jury here yesterday on seven counts of attempting to evade and defeat the payment of income taxes, appeared before United States Commissioner Reginald H. Carter today and posted bond of $10,000.

Mr. Weiss, secretary and treasurer of the Long campaign organization in the state and a prominent hotel man of New Orleans, was accompanied to the commissioner's office by former Congressman Frank R. Reid, of Illinois, who asserted that he appeared place to control of the screw worm, as Mr. Weiss' counsel.

State Laws Aiding New Deal Urged by Administration

Legislatures Asked To Enact Measures to Back Policy of Federal Government

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—(AP)—The administration was shown today to be using the prestige demonstrated at the November election in an unprecedented effort to influence the states to enact laws reinforcing several phases of the New Deal.

With 42 legislatures meeting next month, President Roosevelt himself and prominent members of his official advisory family have been urging state legislatures to facilitate NRA code enforcement, provide for unemployment insurance, maximum wages, and to make the FWA and housing programs more effective.

Mr. Roosevelt interested himself directly and emphatically only yesterday in connection with the housing program. He wrote letters to the governors of virtually all the states asking ing laws that would permit larger loans for home construction and repair, to be insured by federal money. His action was taken upon the suggestion of James A. Moffett, housing administrator, who explained that in numerous states loans on mortgages are limited to 50 per cent of value. His own belief was that with federal insurance behind such loans a maximum of 80 per cent would not be too much.

Backed From Start.
The idea of backing NRA up with state legislation has been broadcast almost from the beginning of that agency. Fourteen states already have laws providing penalties for code violations. Twelve of these will die automatically with the national industrial recovery act next June.

The NRA, however, is to be enacted in a modified form, apparently retaining the principles of collective bargaining, maintenance of minimum wages, and the ban on child labor. As soon as the details are settled the drive for new state laws will begin.

State legislation backing up the codes removes entirely the knottiest constitutional question in NRA—the validity of the law as it applies to

Bold Note Exchange Made by Bank Thief

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—(UP)—The thief who stole $500,000 in treasury notes from the United States Trust Company yesterday coolly walked into the federal reserve bank and exchanged two $10,000 certificates for smaller denominations, detectives discovered today.

The exchange was made before news of the robbery became public and before banks and other financial institutions received serial numbers of the stolen notes. Still missing are five $100,000 notes and seven of the $10,000 issues.

The robbery has completely baffled police. Messengers and bank employees who handled the notes have been exonerated and the authorities are without clue to the identity of the thief.

Companies whose products do not pass beyond the boundaries of the state in which they are produced. That question is involved in a case now headed for supreme court adjudication.

Jobless Insurance.
Secretary Perkins spoke up only last night for state unemployment insurance laws and a five-day 40-hour week as subjects the legislatures should work on and approve this winter. They should, she said, "get busy without delay."

A bill covering the unemployment insurance question is to have administration backing in the coming session of congress.

From present indications it probably will be based upon a principle of federal action to spur the states into creating state unemployment insurance funds.

State hour and wage legislation also was urged by a conference on labor standards called by Miss Perkins. It was attended by state labor department heads and representatives of civic organizations.

HEAVY LOSS BARED IN COAST ROBBERY

Gems, Furs and Rugs Valued at $175,000 to $250,000 Stolen.

ALHAMBRA, Cal., Dec. 15.—(AP)—Jewelry, furs and rugs of an estimated value of between $175,000 and $250,000 were stolen last Wednesday or Thursday from the home of Mrs. Delphine Slattery, the sheriff's office disclosed today.

Among the most valuable articles reported to have been taken were:

A 20-carat diamond ring valued at $100,000.
A string of 97 pearls, $30,000.
A diamond bracelet, $10,000.
A platinum necklace set with diamonds and sapphires, $3,500.
Five oriental rugs, $8,800.
A Russian sable coat, $10,000.
A Russian evening wrap of ermine, $6,000.

Cash totaling $12,500.
A gray evening wrap trimmed with chinchilla, valued at $2,500.

The robbery occurred during Mrs. Slattery's absence. Police were informed of the theft Friday and detectives have been working quietly on the case ever since, sheriff's officers said.

The house was ransacked and ransacked in every room, but the thieves overtook several furs and small items of jewelry.

Most of the valuables, Mrs. Slattery told officers, were hidden in various parts of the house, which has no safe or private vault.

Newest Philco Incorporates Latest Radio Improvements

A de luxe radio and phonograph combination, the newest and finest creation of the Philco Radio and Television Corporation, on display at Henry L. Reid Company, 1024 Peachtree street, J. C. Brown, (left) Philco distributor in this territory, is examining the new machine with Mr. Reid.

Only 500 of the new Model 500-X Philco, the newest creation of the Philco Radio and Television Corporation, are being produced by the company, it was announced Saturday. The new machine, listed at $600, incorporates every improvement known to radio, including high fidelity, American and foreign short wave reception and automatic phonograph reproduction, playing 12 records without stopping.

High fidelity is considered the closest approach yet achieved to reproducing in radio the full range of the human ear. The sound frequency, range covered by the human ear extends from 40 to 10,000 cycles. Heretofore the best radio reproduction achieved extended over a range of 40 to 5,000 cycles. The high fidelity Philco covers from 40 to 7,500 cycles.

The cabinet is the handsomest the company has ever produced. The exterior is finished principally in matched burr walnut and ebony inlay gives an exquisite design.

Readers Borrowed 1,035,171 Books From the Carnegie Library in Year

Despite a sharp decline in funds for new books and general curtailment of activities because of low revenue, a total of 1,035,171 books were placed in circulation by the Carnegie library and its branches in the last year, Miss Jessie Hopkins, the librarian, reported Saturday to Mayor James L. Key.

In addition the library reported the reference department served 42,555 persons during the year, helped to assemble material for 245 lectures, compiled 424 special lists and gave various information to 6,141 persons over the telephone.

The report also showed that 11,294 new members, who previously had never availed themselves of the library facilities, joined the library during the year and that 113,953 persons were served by the newspaper and periodicals rooms.

Loss Entirely in Fiction.
Although the number of books placed in circulation during the year was somewhat lower than last year, Miss Hopkins told Mayor Key she was gratified to report that an analysis in loss of circulation showed the loss was entirely in books of fiction and non-fiction works continued to show a gain, being 37.8 per cent of the total circulation compared with 36.4 of the total circulation in 1933.

The librarian revealed that she made a comparison of the social and professional status of the readers with the type of books they read, using one single volume, Laird's "Increasing Personal Efficiency." She reported it was found the book was taken out by persons in the following office positions:

The secretary of one of Atlanta's largest industrial plants; a clerk in the advertising department of the same plant; an office clerk in one of the city's largest department stores; a typist in a manufacturing plant; an employee of a certified public accountant; and three persons without employment.

Story of Plans and Achievement Of City's First Sermon Revealed

By THORNWELL JACOBS JR.
During the 1940's, almost 100 years ago, the Rev. John Thurman preached the first sermon that had ever been heard on the site of the city that later was to become Atlanta.

The Rev. Thurman was about 30 years of age at the time and had been licensed in 1837 by the Methodist Episcopal church. He lived in De Kalb county not far from what is now known as East Atlanta, and had been serving the Mt. Zion church and church which was located about two miles up the Marietta road.

The insignificant Mariettaville was hardly large enough to call itself a town at the time. Native chinquapin flourished undisturbed in the very doors of the few scattered cabins, and the turkey gobbler strutted through the underbrush that then covered ground now occupied by the First National Bank building, and other buildings equally as centrally located. Tom Kyle and Bill Forsythe, two of the first settlers, owned some of the stores, which they operated on the north side of what is now known as Decatur street, and "Cousin" John Thrasher was running a commissary from which he supplied the men working on the grading of the state railroad. These little establishments made up the business enterprises of Mariettaville.

A Mr. Wells had just completed a small frame building, which he was planning to use as a residence. It was located on the site which is now occupied by the Kimball House, and consisted of only one room.

It was his idea to have the "meeting" that resulted in Atlanta's first sermon, and an appointment was made called "Painter" Smith, secured the services of the Rev. John Thurman, and an appointment was made for two weeks later.

While he waited quite a gathering came to Mr. Wells' new home to hear the preacher. There was Mr. Wells' family, Mr. Ivey, Elias Wood and his brother, "Painter" Smith, and others including the brother of Governor Lumpkin, who had contracted to build the railroad depot.

The ladies sat inside the one-room house and the men stood in the yard. The minister placed himself in the doorway, so that he could be seen by all.

"The text and the gist of the sermon were forgotten," the Rev. Thurman said later, "but I will always remember some exhortations made by the Rev. Lumpkin, who concluded the service."

The congregation was dismissed by an earnest benediction when the sermon was over.

The Rev. Thurman later became affiliated with the Methodist Protestant church, of which he was the pastor, now located on Moreland avenue in a part. He later sold his property and moved to Carroll county, where he settled six miles north of Bowden. Before his death he donated the site for the Smith chapel church and cemetery.

In sight of his old homestead now stands a white house set in peaceful surroundings which are in keeping with the spirit of his life. It is occupied by "Aunt Annie" Tynes, Thurman, widow of the late J. L. Thurman, youngest son of the pioneer pastor. With her lives the family of Thurman Sherrill, a great-grandson.

"Uncle John" Thurman, the conscientious, considerate "circuit rider," died at the age of 84. The memory of his godly life and example is cherished by almost 100 descendants, some of whom are still living in Atlanta.

Girl Truant, 13, Weds, Must Return to School

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Dec. 15.—(AP)—Marguerite White Tate, 13, pretty red-haired problem of truant officers, is going back to school again, this time a surprised married woman.

Only a few weeks ago the seventh grade student was before the juvenile court on a truancy charge. She was released on her promise that she would go to school.

Today she was returned to the court.

"Why haven't you been going to school?" demanded the judge.

"But I was married last Saturday," gasped the girl. "I didn't know anybody had to go after they were married."

The court advised her and the bridegroom, Edward Tate, 21, that it would be necessary for her to return to classes until she passes the eighth grade or the age of 16.

INDUSTRIAL DRAFT IN WARTIME URGED

Legislation Would Eliminate All Profits, Senator Clark Declares.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—(AP)—A democratic member of the senate munitions committee announced today he was drafting a plan to take all the profits out of war, despite the fact that President Roosevelt has named a committee to frame such legislation.

Senator Clark, democrat, Missouri, said his program included taking charge of all the nation's resources—in other words literally drafting industry as well as humans. He said he was studying also a plan for the nationalization of military inventions. The group designated by the president to write an anti-war-profit measure is headed by Bernard Baruch, New York financier. Some of the republican members of the senate committee once said they regarded Mr. Roosevelt's move as an effort to bring the munitions investigation to an early end.

"A man drafted into the military service doesn't have a chance to argue with the government over hours or pay. Why should industry?" Clark said today.

Clark's proposal was added to half a dozen others which have been revived as a result of the senate committee's disclosures and the president's action.

Chairman Nye, of the investigating group, already has said he would reintroduce his bill to impose a 68 percent tax on all incomes above $10,000 after the declaration of a war. The North Dakota senator also has demanded the nationalization of the munitions industry without waiting for another conflict.

Senator Vandenberg, republican, Michigan, another member of the committee, is expected to reintroduce the recommendations of the old war policies commission, of which he was a member, to levy a 95 percent wartime tax on all profits in excess of the average for the last three pre-war years.

For many years the war department has had a secret plan for mobilizing industry in time of war. The munitions committee will launch a public investigation of this program next week in an effort to show it would not prevent excessive profits.

was held at the old Candler field race track 23 years ago and more than 6,000 people attended.

"At that time," said Mr. Hopkins Saturday, "the mail was carried from Candler field and dropped at the outskirts of Atlanta near the federal prison. From there it was brought into the city by truck. Many people patronized the booth set up at Candler field in order to send their first airmail letter, despite the short distance it would go."

Mr. Hopkins feels, he said, that the opening of this new direct air route from Chicago to Miami will prove a jump forward in the development of Atlanta as an air center. The Douglas luxury airliners will make the flight from Chicago to Miami—a distance of 1,267 miles—in about eight hours.

Record Flight Planned.

The Atlanta host will join the party for a record flight to Miami next Sunday dinner will be held Monday night in

I Am the Aeroplane

By LINDSEY HOPKINS.

I am the aeroplane conceived in the brain of an ingenious dreamer. My body small—my wings wide—my heart a purring motor. I lift the daring soul to greet the moon, and pierce the clouds in sportive joy. The outgrowth of nervous haste—I announce civilization's onward cry by carrying quickly the message, and measure quickest defeat or victory. I point the way to shells of death only that life may be worth the living. Space melts before my breath, and distance fades beneath my wings. I am the eyes of the army—the dread of the enemy, and democracy's one best bet! I am the aeroplane!

The foregoing was written by Mr. Lindsey Hopkins when airplanes were still called aeroplanes. Their speed was about one-third that of the modern plane.

honor of Captain Rickenbacker, Colonel McCormick, Colonel Knox, Lindsey Hopkins and other members of the first flight party. Miami's committee of 100 will give a reception at their clubrooms on Tuesday and on Wednesday Captain Rickenbacker will attempt a record flight from Miami to Chicago, stopping in Atlanta only eight minutes to refuel.

The only intermediate stops in the new route will be Louisville, Atlanta and Jacksonville. Flight schedules for the hour of departure from Chicago at 1:15 p. m. Northbound airlines will leave Miami at 9 a. m. and arrive at Chicago at 4:40 p. m. This places Atlanta just four hours from Miami and Chicago.

20 Planes in Parade.

Atlanta's own celebration of Orville Wright's first flight in a heavy-lift aircraft will join the nation's demonstrations with a parade of more than 20 planes which will take off from the airport at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning in flight formation covering approximately 15 miles.

The planes will circle the city twice, after which they will be drawn up on the apron before the Candler field hangars for public inspection.

Among the ships which will take part in the Candler field flight will be a Douglas and several Mailings of Eastern Air Lines; ships of the Delta Air Lines; the Western Oil Company plane with Wray Smith, pilot; the Hightower Flying Service ship; the department of commerce inspection ship, with Wiley Wright, superintendent of aeronautic inspection for the southeast, at the controls; ships of the army air corps; Blevins Aircraft Corporation entries; George James in a Condor; the Georgia Tech airplane with Professor George Moody as pilot; an Atlanta Air Tech ship with Gus Leazar pilot; and a number of privately owned planes.

Arrangements for the parade in celebration of National Aviation Day were made through the department of commerce, the army and navy air corps and all aeronautical associations both service and civilian. Jack Gray, manager of Candler field, is in charge of the local program.

J. B. Fowler Sr., 54, Hit, Killed by Auto

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 15.—(AP)—J. B. Fowler Sr., 54, prominent Atlanta man, was instantly killed today when he was struck by a passing automobile on the Atlanta highway between Windsor and Auburn.

Mr. Fowler's car had been in a minor accident, and while waiting for it to be repaired he stepped into the path of an Athens-bound car. A coroner's jury at Windsor decided the accident was unavoidable.

Funeral services for the deceased, an employee of the Georgia Power Company for the past 30 years, will be held Sunday afternoon at Prospect church.

SLAYER OF AGED MAN EXPECTED TO RECOVER

Bishop Shows Improvement After Transfusion; Stories of Killing Confict.

Though Grady hospital attendants Saturday night still considered Tom Bishop, 40, who Friday night, according to police, beat his stepfather-in-law, John N. Bennett, 82, to death with the butt of a shotgun, to be in a serious condition, they stated he had made remarkable progress Saturday following a blood transfusion.

Bishop, according to police, was stabbed in the right side and when taken to Grady hospital Friday night it was thought that he had little chance to recover.

Conflicting accounts hampered the investigation of the case by police Saturday. Bishop, in his story of the affair, which resulted in the death of Bennett, said the elder man made an unprovoked attack on him with the knife and he battered Bennett over the head with the shotgun in self-defense.

Bishop's wife told police that her husband became infuriated with Bennett and charged him with meddling in affairs of the Bishop family, and then assaulted Bennett. The elder man used the knife only in an attempt to protect himself, said Mrs. Bishop. The Bennett and Bishop families live in a house on Third avenue, Hammond park, which they had been jointly occupying for about a year. The argument took place in the house where Bennett was found dead. Bishop was found by officers in the house of a neighbor.

few prying eyes had ever seen the inside of the old house at 113 Alexander street, N. W.

Neighbors Amazed.

When the contents of the will were hinted at Saturday, neighbors were amazed. It was hard for them to connect Miss Trice, her habits and mode of living, with an estate of more than $50,000.

To them she was pictured as the quiet old woman, dressed in wide, old-fashioned skirts, who would acknowledge their daily salutations with a nod or a simply spoken word, but rarely engaged in conversation with them. To them she was the mysterious old woman who lived for years in the house by herself, practically shut off from the world. She had an abhorrence of fire, they knew, and never cooked her own meals. She bought ready-cooked meals at a nearby restaurant and ate them in her home.

She never kept a fire in any of the fireplaces or heating stoves of her home, but depended upon the scant two streams of water from small garden hose on the walls and roof of her home. The water was not sufficient, however, to keep the fire from breaking windows and burning the side of the house.

The house, it was explained by a number of the Atlanta department, is not within the corporate limit. Under the system which was in effect until about two years ago, the Atlanta company would have fought the fire had the owner been one who had agreed to pay the Atlanta department $50 for fighting the fire. However, this agreement has not been in effect for two years, it was explained.

The Druid Hills department, it was stated, has been organized for several months and has been fighting only the cases of those who have subscribed for the protection.

DEKALB HOUSING DRIVE SET JANUARY 1 GOAL

The better housing committee of Dekalb county has set a goal of 7,000 contracts before January 1, it was announced by the committee Saturday.

These contracts will all go under title 1 of the national housing act. After the first of January Title I and III of the housing act, relative to insurance of long-term mortgages on new and existing property will go into effect. Contracts under Title I have nearly reached the goal set by the Dekalb committee and it is expected that the Christmas holidays will favorably affect the housing drive there.

heat from a kerosene lamp for warmth during the coldest days. She slept, they discovered after the fire, on a rickety cot with a thin, inadequate mattress and not much bed clothing. She had little furniture in her home. Much of what she had was broken, but upon close examination was found to be valuable old antique pieces.

Packages Piled in Corners.

Practically all of her possessions were wrapped into packages and were piled in the corners of the various rooms. Some of the packages contained rare linens which had never been used. The only luxury which she permitted herself, it appeared, was the purchase of fine linens.

Other packages contained religious literature and some old and rare books. She was an avid reader of Adventist literature and was well-informed on religious subjects.

Theory that the fire had been started to cover an attempted robbery, practically dissipated by the finding of $1,380 in cash in the room where the woman's body was found, was discarded Saturday by a coroner's jury which returned a verdict that the fire was of accidental origin.

Funeral services for Miss Trice were conducted at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the First Seventh Day Adventist church. Elder H. E. Lysinger officiated and burial, in accordance with the request in her will, was in West View cemetery.

Over Seas

By CHARLES E. HARNER.
Associated Press Foreign Staff.

Out of the welter of jealousies and provocations, which seared Europe half-way out of its wits two weeks ago, has emerged a sudden peace.

The European landscape suddenly shifts from a gray etching of gloomy half-tones to a panorama shot with sunshine through which theoretical doves of peace flit hither and yon.

The latter picture was painted by certain League of Nations optimists; the former was the vision of alarmists. The truth, as usual, seems to fall in between.

Granted that the League of Nations, by assuaging the ruffled feelings of Hungary and Yugoslavia, has smoothed over a nasty international situation—precipitated by the assassination of King Alexander, of Yugoslavia, but arising from old racial differences—it is none the less certain that the League peace savior has not penetrated completely into Europe's old battle wounds.

Yugoslavia went to the League and charged Hungary flatly with responsibility for Alexander's assassination, saying Hungary had harbored the plotters. Then she turned around and started shipping Hungarian citizens back into Hungary just as fast as trains would carry them. Hungary retaliated verbally with a charge that Yugoslavia was trying to cover up on a grave international situation.

Now remarks like that, between nations, are often regarded as mortal offenses and history mentions many a war which was declared on spores of Sarajevo, where an Austrian archduke was assassinated, creating a world war, and advised the world that it looked like rain.

Great Britain, France and Italy, however, were in no mood for war; and they rallied around through the medium of the League of Nations council to calm everything down. They worked as a unit, and when they finished their work, the council, with every appearance of spontaneity, brought in a compromise suggestion which both Yugoslavia and Hungary accepted.

The compromise agreed with Yugoslavia that Hungary was, perhaps, a bit negligent in permitting the anti-Yugoslav terrorists to flourish in Hungary, but added, on the other hand, that since there weren't any good international laws on terrorism, Hungary could hardly have been expected to do anything against them. Then the League condemned terrorism as a bad thing and nominated a committee to draw up some anti-terrorism international laws. Everybody professed himself as satisfied and went home without a shot being fired.

The solution, it developed, was simple—according to almost any dictionary definition. It proved, said League partisans, that the League had developed its authority to a point where nations were satisfied as to its impartiality; it likewise proved, they asserted, that nations would not fight if someone made them count before they knocked chips off shoulders.

As always, cynics hung around the outskirts and commented that the teamwork of Great Britain, France and Italy was backed by a healthy aggression of arms and more to the compromise offer than all the kindly words diplomats exchanged in the council. This matter of healthy armies allied with the beneficent theories of the League also came into the foreground in the smoothing over of the Saar Basin territory problem. British, Italian, Dutch and Swedish soldiers have already moved, or are about to move, into the area, announcing grimly that they'll take care of any fighting which may occur when the Saar residents vote January 13 on whether they wish to be ruled by Germany, France, or the League.

The League, which hopes for peace, has seen to it that this army applied with everything from warplanes and tanks to bayonets, which make it slightly reminiscent of the old-fashioned adage: "In time of peace prepare for war."

Still Europe appears mottled with danger spots despite these League gains. Hungary's assertion of international conflict in Yugoslavia, and the Balkan states, composed as they are of heterogeneous races, are nevertheless, so interrelated that trouble in one area always reacts in other spots.

Also, there appears to be little relaxation in the internal tension of Austria. That country is replete with heterogeneous as a collection of political beliefs as the Balkans are with races.

The Nazis, who desire the amalgamation of Austria and Germany, are increasingly powerful and the government of Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg has shown evidence of not being nearly so opposed to Nazi ideals as was that of Engelbert Dollfuss. As evidence of this was the recent government order to Austrian newspapers to desist from criticisms of Germany.

Equally powerful with the Austrian Nazis are factions which desire above all to preserve the independence of that nation. Powerful outside influences, especially Italy and France, seem equally desirous that Austria shall continue as a separate nation.

The traditional friction between Germany and France has lessened in exact ratio with the smoothing out of the Saar problems. But that fact, instead of adding to the peace picture in Europe, has caused worry in Moscow, for communist Moscow and anti-communist Germany are not too friendly.

ABSOLVED

VIENNA, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Austria and Germany tonight seemed equally determined not to let the slaying of two members of an Austrian border patrol disturb their increasingly good relations.

Although the Vienna government earlier in the day was considering immediate representations to Berlin, it was said officially this evening the German government was not held responsible for the death of the patrolmen, alleged to have been shot by "Austrian legion" Nazis from Germany.

Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg and his foreign minister, Egon Berger-Waldenegg, held two plans for consideration after a two-day conference with Premier Julius Goembs, of Hungary, giving rise to rumors that the conference had been cut short due to the possibility of Austro-German tension growing out of the incident.

Their return, however, was entirely untroubled, and the border patrol incident, officials here stated, and had no connection with the border shooting.

The official version of the shooting, which occurred near the Austro-German border in the vicinity of Erl, was that the border patrol suddenly was confronted by three men who opened fire before the Austrians had time to remove their rifles from the holster.

One of the guards was killed instantly and the other died later.

At the foreign office it was admitted that the border patrol incident was the cause of the encounter still exists. A spokesman, however, said Austria had the assurance of Bavarian authorities that German officials were making vigorous attempts to take into custody the persons who did the shooting.

British dispatches quoted government officials as saying the two men shot were not members of the Austrian legion, but were believed to be Austrian territory from Germany, met the patrol and were slain.

Efforts on the part of Franz von Papen, German minister, to better relations between Germany and Austria have been seconded by Chancellor Schuschnigg, who has instructed newspapers to handle with moderation all matters concerning the Nazis, the Saar plebiscite and the like.

While discontent has been expressed in Austria over the German ultimatum allegedly has given Nazis from Austria, it was not believed that the latest incident would be likely to hinder von Papen's attempt at an Austro-German understanding.

This impression was strengthened by the Austrian government's evident unwillingness to let the matter take on serious proportions and the fact that previous incidents have been cleared up quickly.

Then the League condemned terrorism as a bad thing and nominated a committee to draw up some anti-terrorism international laws. Everybody professed himself as satisfied and went home without a shot being fired.

The solution, it developed, was simple—according to almost any dictionary definition. ## India's 'Frontier Gandhi'

Given 2-Year Sentence

BOMBAY, India, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Abdullah Khan, dubbed the "Frontier Gandhi" for his activities in the northwest frontier, was sentenced today to two years' imprisonment at hard labor on a charge of sedition.

The attending magistrate held that the Ghaflar Khan stirred up people by charging that the government had promulgated laws on the northwest frontier for the deliberate purpose of causing trouble and also by declaring that the police did not protect the people but assaulted them.

The World War Premier outlined Great Britain's economic needs and denied that he intends to bolster up "liberalism, socialism or nationalism," but said he will conduct a national campaign based on the finding of his "brain trust."

This group is to be composed of farmers, bankers, professors, businessmen, scientists, politicians and economists who for several months have been working out a Deal program.

It was expected inclusive schemes for the expenditure of large sums of public funds will be instituted, including public works, National control of the Bank of England is to be done of the projects.

Lloyd George maintained there was "no room for compromise" in the proposal, since Britain is the only country which does not control what is in essence a state bank.

The aged statesman said today he intended to publish the whole program early in 1935. When told that his scheme had been compared to the American New Deal program, he replied: "I hope it will be a New Deal for all classes in the community."

Declaring that Britain was making "no mistake" in relieving unemployment, Lloyd George charged that national government was afraid of schemes commensurate with the magnitude of the emergency.

It was expected the Welsh wizard would personally open his campaign at a public meeting in London or at one of the cities in Britain's depressed areas.

NEW DEAL IS ON WAY, HERRIDGE SAYS. OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 15.—(UP)—In a surprising speech today, W. D. Herridge, Canadian minister to the United States, declared a strong trend towards socialism, with a new deal for Canada "was on the way, and that capitalism is no longer sacred."

The importance of his declaration was emphasized by his relationship to the administration, and the fact that he is a brother-in-law of Premier Bennett, who was present when the speech was delivered.

Attacking the present Canadian economic system, Herridge said that many believe in capitalism, but are perishing, and that for one, he was ready to judge between the merits of capitalism and socialism.

The conference was reported to be a result of a raid, allegedly by government agents, on the premises of the newspaper Action three days ago. Action, supporter of the ABC party, had denounced Batista and persisted in a bomb explosion last night damaged a branch aqueduct five miles from Havana but the city water supply was not affected.

Four persons were injured tonight when a motorist tossed a bomb into a department store in one of the capital's shopping districts. The front of the store was badly damaged and crowds were thrown into a panic.

A judge today ordered the arrest of Gabriel Landra, former secretary of the treasury under President Carlos Meniendia, on charges of misappropriation of $165,000 in treasury funds.

The order came from Judge Jose R. Agramonte, president of the court. Landra recently tendered his resignation from the cabinet.

The marquis reported the aerial attack took place while Hitler was flying over East Berlin. The other plane, its identity yet unknown, says the marquis, roared down from the clouds toward Hitler's craft, letting loose a hail of machine gun bullets. ## CHURCH Program Inspired by Roosevelt, David Lloyd George Reveals.

CHURCH, England, Dec. 15.—(AP)—David Lloyd George, at the age of 71, was preparing today to launch a bold plan for a nation-wide British new deal, inspired by the "wise lead" which he says President Roosevelt has given the world.

Introducing today, the World War Premier outlined Great Britain's economic needs and denied that he intends to bolster up "liberalism, socialism or nationalism," but said he will conduct a national campaign based on the finding of his "brain trust."

This group is to be composed of farmers, bankers, professors, businessmen, scientists, politicians and economists who for several months have been working out a Deal program.

It was expected inclusive schemes for the expenditure of large sums of public funds will be instituted, including public works, National control of the Bank of England is to be done of the projects.

Lloyd George maintained there was "no room for compromise" in the proposal, since Britain is the only country which does not control what is in essence a state bank.

The aged statesman said today he intended to publish the whole program early in 1935. When told that his scheme had been compared to the American New Deal program, he replied: "I hope it will be a New Deal for all classes in the community."

Declaring that Britain was making "no mistake" in relieving unemployment, Lloyd George charged that national government was afraid of schemes commensurate with the magnitude of the emergency.

It was expected the Welsh wizard would personally open his campaign at a public meeting in London or at one of the cities in Britain's depressed areas.

NEW DEAL IS ON WAY, HERRIDGE SAYS. OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 15.—(UP)—In a surprising speech today, W. D. Herridge, Canadian minister to the United States, declared a strong trend towards socialism, with a new deal for Canada "was on the way, and that capitalism is no longer sacred."

The importance of his declaration was emphasized by his relationship to the administration, and the fact that he is a brother-in-law of Premier Bennett, who was present when the speech was delivered.

Attacking the present Canadian economic system, Herridge said that many believe in capitalism, but are perishing, and that for one, he was ready to judge between the merits of capitalism and socialism.

The conference was reported to be a result of a raid, allegedly by government agents, on the premises of the newspaper Action three days ago. Action, supporter of the ABC party, had denounced Batista and persisted in a bomb explosion last night damaged a branch aqueduct five miles from Havana but the city water supply was not affected.

Four persons were injured tonight when a motorist tossed a bomb into a department store in one of the capital's shopping districts. The front of the store was badly damaged and crowds were thrown into a panic.

A judge today ordered the arrest of Gabriel Landra, former secretary of the treasury under President Carlos Meniendia, on charges of misappropriation of $165,000 in treasury funds.

The order came from Judge Jose R. Agramonte, president of the court. Landra recently tendered his resignation from the cabinet.

Neither Hitler nor his pilot was injured, says the marquis, but the marquis' flight was followed by a German leader to redouble precautions to guard him.

The marquis reported the aerial attack took place while Hitler was flying over East Berlin. The other plane, its identity yet unknown, says the marquis, roared down from the clouds toward Hitler's craft, letting loose a hail of machine gun bullets. Hitler's plane disappeared in the direction of Lithuania.

U.S. NAVY STAND

Japan's Formal Denunciation of Treaty Is Grimly Awaited.

LONDON, Dec. 15.—(AP)—The American delegation to the London naval conversations stood its ground today, grimly awaiting Japan's formal denunciation of the Washington naval treaty.

The stand was designed to place squarely upon Japan responsibility for the failure of the preliminary negotiations.

Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, of the Japanese delegation, made a futile effort yesterday to persuade Admiral William H. Standley, one of the United States experts, to suspend the present conversations immediately, contending the American policy placed an unfair onus on Japan for the breakup of the treaty.

While the Japanese awaited further instructions from Tokyo today, Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, and Admiral Standley and Norman, American ambassador at large, planned to while away the time in a golf game.

Declaring that Britain was making "no mistake" in relieving unemployment, Lloyd George charged that national government was afraid of schemes commensurate with the magnitude of the emergency.

It was expected the Welsh wizard would personally open his campaign at a public meeting in London or at one of the cities in Britain's depressed areas.

Tax Exemptions

City to Wall, Says Assessor

BOSTON, Dec. 15.—(AP)—An interested spectator at dragging operations in Muddy river today for the body of six-year-old William Cossaboom Jr., missing since last night, proved to be little William himself.

The boy was sighted by a chum as he stood in the crowd watching police drag for his body.

PARIS, Dec. 15.—(AP)—A campaign for longer conscript service in the French army was in progress today under the sponsorship of military experts who believe the German army will outnumber the French 2 to 1 by next autumn.

Agitation for extension of the present one-year service was inaugurated by General Rene Tournes and Meisel simultaneously with recommendations by the army committee of taxation at about five per cent of the market value as of January 31 in the year in which the tax is levied.

The first, according to legal authorities, would not entail a constitutional amendment, while the latter would be made statewide instead of local. It would cut state ad valorem receipts from 15 to 80 per cent and reduce revenues from that source by about $4,000,000 a year to approximately $1,000,000, Controller William B. Harrison asserted.

The city has suggested several proposals to make up the loss which would be a natural consequence of the tax revision. One suggestion is to increase the city's revenue by 10 per cent, but this would be a considerable increase.

Removal of restrictions on Atlanta's water rate to empower city council and the mayor to fix rates. Diversion of one-third of the tax collected from Atlanta for gasoline taxes into the municipal treasury to reach $500,000 a year.

Levy of an occupational tax not to exceed $10 a year on persons who earn their livelihood in Atlanta, but who live outside the city limits.

Levy of a 1 per cent tax against loans where the interest and service charges amount to more than 8 per cent a year.

Removal of the $300 annual license levy on businesses.

Little is regarded as the speaker for the assessors because he is the senior member of that body.

"Could not say a word," said "Atlanta could not last a year if the $1,500,000 loss of income proposed by the home exemption measure and the intangible classification were voted without other measures to provide other revenues," Little said. "If we are to surrender these ad valorem values, we must replace them with other income or suffer the dire consequences which are sure to follow."

"I think a classification of intangibles is a proper thing and should be passed, but we must have sufficient funds with which to operate the necessary services of government or quit. We in this office are charged with the responsibility of placing our properties in the tax books in order to procure funds. If the legislature limits us, other revenue must be found."

At the present time, we have about $400,000 in intangibles on city books for this year. If we accede to the proposals to reduce that to 15 per cent, it will be about $100,000, and the city will lose the revenue from $300,000 in taxable property as a result.

A $5,000 exemption on the 20,000 Atlanta homes occupied by 20,000 would mean a loss of another $100,000 in taxable valuations. That means a revenue loss of $1,500,000 added to the loss on intangibles.

"Atlanta banks and public utilities now pay on about $15,000,000 worth of securities. If we place on them a 10 per cent tax, we will create a more general taxation system and better distribute the burden."

Mayor James L. Key has suggested that the city council should vote to divert all profits to the city treasury in order to obviate the necessity of imposing a 32 per cent aggregate cut in the salaries of city officials in 1935. He has been backed in his efforts, but plans to renew them if the assembly fails to provide new city funds.

PROBE BARES DRINKING BY CHILDREN, 12 TO 16. CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 15.—(UP)—Drinking parties by 12 to 16-year-old boys and girls students at William Dean Howells school were reported today by the press. The men charged with furnishing the students with whiskey.

The charges were placed by Policewoman Mildred Wilcox against Miss Wilcox said she began the investigation December 6 when teachers at the school complained that children were coming to classes suffering from "hangovers."

Information about drinking among pupils was supplied by six girls, who said they obtained liquor from one man and then were given the use of the other's home in which to drink it.

MADDOO IMPROVED, PHYSICIANS STATE. MANILA, P. I., Dec. 15.—(AP)—Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, of California, will have completely recovered from an acute attack of indigestion within a few days, physicians at St. Bernard General hospital, where he is confined, announced today.

His condition is not serious, they explained. When the senator was taken ill while in Manila it was at first feared he might be suffering from appendicitis.

MAYOR CONSIDERS COMMITTEE POSTS

Key Preparing Council- manic Set-Up for New Year Ahead.

Mayor James L. Key who, when council reorganizes January 1, will begin his ninth year as mayor of Atlanta and thus will set an all-time record as the city's chief executive, Saturday was wrestling with committee appointments for the new year.

Although few basic changes in the present setup are anticipated, of necessity there are some positions which he must fill because of changes in council personnel.

One of the important appointments is chairman of the parks committee to succeed G. Everett Millican, who will retire from council to become senator from the thirty-fifth Georgia (Fulton county) district.

There are at least two possibilities there in Alderman Frank H. Reynolds, who is now serving as mayor pro tem, and Alderman L. Gloor Hailey, of the ninth ward.

Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, now provisional mayor pro tem, probably will be elevated without opposition to succeed Reynolds, and Alderman J. Sid Tiller is slated for Gilliam's place in the council reorganization.

Gilliam is being considered as chairman of the schools committee of council, which automatically carries with it membership on the board of education. Others who also are being discussed for the post are Councilman J. Frank Beck, Alderman Reynolds, Councilman Howard Haire and Councilman G. Dan Bridges. Key has not decided what he will do yet about this position, regarded as one of the most strategic posts because of the relations between the mayor and school department. Key has insisted that several departments be culled from school curricula, but the school board has maintained its services virtually intact.

Gilliam, because of his contacts in Washington and because of the necessity and urgency of sewer improvements to abate nuisances, is considered as one of the strong contenders for chairman of the sewer committee to succeed Reynolds. In that event, the mayor would want to give Reynolds a good berth.

Only one change in the police committee personnel is anticipated in the new appointments, it was said Saturday. Councilman Aubrey Milam, who will become chairman of the finance committee to succeed Gilliam, has asked to be relieved.

Alvin L. Richards, new councilman-elect from the thirteenth ward and who served formerly as a member of the police committee, was considered to have an inside track on that post, although Key has made no definite commitments.

Alderman Tiller will head the benevolence and pensions committee for next year and Alderman Hailey, who now holds that post, will be shifted to another.

Tiller also is chairman of the electric lights committee and Key probably will not rename him as Tiller takes the position he cannot devote the time necessary to so many important assignments.

Alderman Ellis B. Barrett may be retained as chairman of the streets committee.

Councilman Bridges will continue to serve as chairman of the police committee and Haire, Alderman Faris A. Mitchell and Councilman George B. Lyle probably will remain as the three other members.

Councilman Walter M. Sutton, of the twelfth ward, is sure to be kept as chairman of the board of firemasters. Councilman William T. Knight will remain as head of the housing commission and Councilman John A. White will stay as chairman of the auditorium committee. Councilman Max M. Cuba and the tax committee will be left intact, it was believed Saturday.

All in all, the committee changes for the most part will be limited to the necessary changes, it was anticipated.

Key, at the end of this month, will have served as long as mayor as any other man in the city's history. James Woodward also served eight years, but with the new two-year term beginning in January, Key will have set an all-time record. Before being elected as mayor he served 12 years as a member of the Atlanta board of education and also served as a member of city council.

7 NEW ARCHITECTS REGISTERED IN STATE

The Georgia state board for the examination and registration of architects announced Saturday that it had re-elected its present officers for 1935 and had granted certificates of registration for practice in the state to seven architects.

The officers re-elected include E. Oren Smith, of Columbus, chairman; W. Elliott Dunwoody, of Macon, vice chairman, and Dr. R. C. Coleman, joint secretary of examining boards, secretary.

The architects registered follow: Elden duBignon Adkins, Vienna, Ga.; Felix Julius Dreyfus, New Orleans; Charles William Fant, Anderson, S. C.; Stanislaw J. Makielak, Charlottesville, Va.; Solis Seiferth, New Orleans; Carol Mosman Smith, Atlanta; and Leon Charles Weiss, New Orleans.

FLING, NOLAND BACKED FOR BOARD PRESIDENT

Elevation of Frank R. Fling to the post of presidency of the Atlanta board of education to succeed J. Ira Hareless, who will retire, was forecast Saturday in city hall circles.

S. C. Noland, ninth ward commissioner, also was reported to have considerable backing for the post when the board meets to select officers for the new year.

Atlanta's 50,000 school youngsters will begin the Christmas holiday season at 11 o'clock Thursday morning and will not return to classrooms until Wednesday, January 2.

DEKALB COUNTY WOMEN URGE MILK INSPECTION

Members of the DeKalb County League of Women Voters Saturday urged health departments of Atlanta and Decatur to provide sufficient funds to insure inspection and enforcement of milk ordinances and that the commissioner of DeKalb county appropriate inspection funds.

Resolutions calling on the people to take steps to secure the protection of the milk were passed by the league and were signed by Mrs. Frank Lamons, chairman, department of economic welfare.

Fathers in Antarctic Expedition To Direct Santa Claus Over Radio

When Old Saint Nick, snuggled in his warm arctic clothes, speeds over the countryside behind his fleet reindeer this Christmas, he will carry special consignments of presents for 12 children, all of whose fathers are at Little America with the Byrd antarctic expedition.

Let Santa Claus, in rushing to meet the Christmas demands of all his little friends, might become confused and, say, deliver the presents for these children to Little America, the sponsors of the weekly two-way Byrd antarctic broadcasts are taking special pains to see that no such unfortunate mixup shall occur.

During the weekly broadcast over the WABC-Columbia network from 9 to 9:30 p. m. Wednesday, the fathers of the children will take to the airwaves from Little America and give Santa Claus his instructions. The presents for the 12 children are to be purchased by the sponsors of the broadcasts and Santa Claus will tuck them in his sled as he sallies forth on Christmas Eve.

The yuletide spirit will be developed throughout the broadcast, Mark Warnow and his orchestra will provide a program of seasonal music for the special entertainment of the antarctic explorers, who will be spending their second Christmas Day away from their homes, and a group of Cleveland, Ohio, school children will sing Christmas carols. These Cleveland children have been chosen to participate in the program because of their interest in the Byrd expedition. Under the tutelage of Helen O. Civiletti, their teacher, they have been studying the activities of the expedition since its departure in October, 1933.

As a supplement to these program features, several relatives of members of the expedition will exchange Yuletide greetings with their loved ones over the 10,000-mile wireless circuit linking New York and Little America. Charles J. V. Murphy, announcer at Little America, will relate what plans are being made at the southernmost human outpost for celebration of Christmas during his regular two-way conversation with Harry von Zell, CBS announcer in New York.

Among those at Little America—fathers who will be unable to spend Christmas with their children—are: Alphonse Carbone, chief chef, of Cambridge, Mass.; J. A. Felzer, aerial photographer, of Pensacola, Fla.; E. F. Cox, carpenter and dairyman, of Arcade, N. Y.; C. O. Peterson, newsreel photographer, of Fresno, Cal.; Richard D. Black, surveyor, of Grand Forks, N. D.; A. H. Waite Jr., radio operator, of Holliston, Mass.; I. A. Tingloff, carpenter, of Watertown, Mass.; L. T. Miller, sailmaker, of

Cellmate Hit in Nose, Man's Troubles Multiply

Police Turnkey B. O. Banks is of the opinion that C. O. Thompson, of Bedford place address, is a very difficult man to get along with. E. T. Jackson, 54, of a Means street address, bears out Turnkey Banks' opinion.

Shortly after Thompson, who had been arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct, had been put in a cell with Jackson by Turnkey Banks he responded to Jackson's welcome by punching Jackson on the nose. Jackson was treated at Grady hospital for a broken nose and now Thompson has two charges of disorderly conduct to explain away to the recorder.

Dare, Va.; J. M. Sterrett, medical department, of Beaver Falls, Pa., and Vernon Boyd, machinist, of Buffalo, New York.

TAX EXEMPTION PLAN IN COUNCIL MONDAY

Alderman L. Gloor Hailey's proposal to exempt new construction improvements made here from taxation for a period of two years is the only major matter slated for council action Monday. It was indicated Saturday.

An adverse recommendation of the city planning commission on a petition for a permit to operate the farmers' curb market at Washington street and Trinity avenue also is slated for action.

SIMPSON IS ELECTED TO HEAD FOOD BROKERS

J. Frank Fair and J. H. Campbell Jr. Are Other Officers Chosen.

The annual meeting of the Atlanta Food Brokers' Association was held at the Ansley hotel last Tuesday, and the following officers were elected to serve the ensuing year: W. R. Simpson, president; J. Frank Fair, vice president, and J. A. Campbell Jr., secretary and treasurer.

The new officers of the Food Brokers' Association have been prominently identified in the distribution of groceries and kindred products for many years in this territory, and enjoy the confidence and good will of the wholesale and retail grocers wherever they are known.

All of the merchandise food brokers in Atlanta are members of the Food Brokers' Association, which has for its object a better understanding of their merchandising problems, also establishing a spirit of co-operation between competitors.

100th Emory Birthday Deferred Until 1936 by Board of Trustees

Emory University could celebrate her one-hundredth birthday Tuesday, but to the disappointment of an examination-ridden student body the board of trustees has decided to hold the centennial celebration in 1936. Instead of getting a big birthday cake Tuesday, the students get exams all because the trustees decided the birth of Emory occurred at the time it was granted a charter as a degree-granting institution instead of at the time it was begun as a manual labor school near Covington.

The actual birth of Emory University occurred, however, on December 18, 1834, when the Georgia legislature passed an act creating the Georgia Conference Manual Labor school near Covington, in Newton county. And it was from this preparatory school that old Emory College, now Emory University, was a direct development.

Dr. Henry M. Bullock, an Emory graduate in the class of 1924, who now is writing the university's history, declares that the manual labor school was "the true beginning of Emory College, and that it was even more vitally related to the college than Emory College was to Emory University."

Furthermore, according to Dr. Bullock, the school in Covington was by no means limited to manual labor. Students were required to work three hours per day on the school farm in order to help support the institution, but a comparison of the manual labor school's curriculum with that of Yale in 1841.

In 1834 shows the two to be identical.

On November 4, 1835, Dr. New, founder of the Manual Labor school, and the board of trustees, asked the Georgia Methodist conference "its consent to an application to the legislature of Georgia for an act extending the charter of the school, as so to confer the privileges of a University on it." Subsequently, with the consent of the Georgia conference, and with an extension of the charter by the legislature, Emory College, named after Bishop John Emory, was founded.

On July 13, 1837, Emory College took over the assets and liabilities of the Manual Labor school, and on September 17, 1838, the first class entered the college proper, graduating in 1841.

A WORD FROM HENRY FORD

We expect to announce our new 1935 cars, and have them in dealers' showrooms where you may see and examine them, on Saturday, December 29th. The cars are coming off the line now and distribution will soon commence.

I have never been very much in favor of the custom of yearly models. Good motor cars do not become obsolete simply because the calendar turns a leaf. Our former custom was to put improvements on our cars as soon as we developed and tested them, so that there was continuous refinement and progress. The custom of introducing new models annually is justified when they are really new, and not merely equipped with new talking points for the purposes of salesmanship.

Last year's Ford V-8 was a good car, the best we had built up to that time. We don't say to any customer with a last year's car that his car is out of date. If it is giving him service, and if he is not in the market for a new car, there is no reason for him to feel that he is behind the procession. He still drives the fundamentally latest thing in cars. The new car has all the qualities and advantages of last year's car, with something added.

The improvements we offer are not experimental in any sense; they were thoroughly tried out under every conceivable circumstance before we finally adopted them. That, in fact, is our job all the year 'round—refining, improving, making new balance of qualities, always adhering closely to our principle of continuous growth in the basic purpose of the Ford car.

The 1935 V-8 engine is practically the same engine we built in 1934, because we have not learned how to build a better one. It has, however, some refinements, amongst which are the copper-lead connecting rod bearings, and the new type of crankcase ventilation.

Most of the improvements concern the riding qualities of the car. There is now more comfort both in driving the car and riding in it—and it was always a very comfortable car to drive. This year we have paid particular attention to the comfort of the back seat rider. The rear seat is now forward of the rear axle, so that all passengers ride between the axles. With the new flexible springs, this gives what has been aptly described as "a front seat ride for the back seat passengers." Besides, it has permitted changes in the design of the body which have resulted in those lines of beauty so much in favor with automobile owners today.

We have always had three fundamentals—Durability, Economy of operation and maintenance, and Comfort. Safety, of course, is taken for granted. The Durability is just what it always was; no one needs to be told at this late day that Fords are built to last. The Economy is even greater than before—an 8-cylinder engine with the economy of a four. As to Comfort, however, there has been a very considerable advance, as I think you will agree when you have tried the car out.

We built more than 20,000,000 cars previous to the V-8. We have built 1,300,000 V-8 cars. The V-8, we believe, is the proper engine for the low-price car field, which is our field.

This 1935 car will be on display December 29th, with all details ready for your information. It is entirely probable that some of our prices will be lower than in 1934. We want them lower because we expect to build a million cars and better next year, and the price must be right. If the price is right, people will buy; men will go back to work; a thousand related businesses will feel the new impulse. At least, we are trying to make 1935 a busier, happier and more hopeful year.

High Museum of Art To Continue Exhibition of Diego Rivera's Frescos

The High Museum of Art announced Saturday that for a limited time the exhibition of frescos by Diego Rivera in reproduction will be continued because of the large attendance at the exhibit, the popularity of which has added to Rivera's fame as one of the world's leading fresco painters.

The finest examples of this Mexican artist's work are to be found in Mexico City in the building of the ministry of education. Eleven reproductions in the High Museum collection pertain to these frescos. Eight show the work in the Palace of Cortes, Cuernavaca. This noted man painted a mural for Rockefeller Center, Radio City, New York city, which was never used because of a serious controversy which arose. This notoriety brought him prominently before the public and probably made more friends for Rivera than enemies.

A second noteworthy exhibition at the museum is a collection of 40 drawings, lithographs and etchings by Raymond Creekmore, Baltimore, Md. Mr. Creekmore is a Virginian by birth and before he attempted this interesting series of Mexican life, he studied profoundly in the best schools of our country. This artist is one of the most salient in recording his subject matter in pure line. He has a great future and many of the museums of the country have exhibited his work. Atlanta is indeed fortunate in having the opportunity to enjoy this collection.

Mrs. E. R. Epperson will again conduct a gallery tour at 3 o'clock this afternoon and speak about these two collections. Mrs. Epperson is particularly interesting in conveying the idea expressed by modern art. The High Museum is open daily from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m., on Sunday afternoons from 2 until 5 o'clock and every Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings from 7 until 9 o'clock. The public is cordially invited free of charge.

TALMADGE TO ATTEND FREIGHT RATE PARLEY

Five Dixie Governors Assure Graves of Attendance.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 15.—(AP)—Governor-elect Graves said he had received assurance of attendance this afternoon from five of the eight southeastern governors invited to attend a conference on freight rates at Birmingham, December 19.

The governor-elect said he planned to contact the remaining three governors today, if possible, and attempt to persuade them to attend or send representatives to the meeting. Graves' action followed a report from Governor B. M. Miller that only two governors had definitely assured

Yule Holidays Increase As School Is Burned

FITCHBURG, Mass., Dec. 15.—(AP)—Fitchburg High school's 1,150 pupils looked forward tonight to an extra week of Christmas vacation as city officials made plans to replace their building which was destroyed by fire today with an estimated loss of $750,000.

One fireman met death in the blaze and two others were critically hurt as they fought the flames in freezing weather.

They would attend the conference he called at the suggestion of Graves several days ago.

"I do not care to name the five who have accepted at this time, but I expect and hope the representation will be unanimous," said Graves. Meanwhile, Governor Miller said he was awaiting a conference with Colonel Graves before making a definite statement regarding the conference. Governors Ibra C. Blackwood, of South Carolina, and Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, were the two chief executives informing Governor Miller they would attend.

Students of Morehouse, Spelman To Give Carol Concert Thursday

The students of Morehouse and Spelman Colleges will give their eighth annual Christmas carol concert at 8 o'clock Thursday night in Sisters' chapel. The program will feature European and American Christmas folk carols and American negro folk carols.

The European carols to be featured are: "As Lately We Watch" (Austrian); "On That Most Blessed Night" (Bagpipers' carol—Neapolitan); "O Night, Peaceful and Blessed" (Normandie); "O Baby, Three I Love" (Italian); "Noel de Cour" (Arpajon); and a Derbyshire carol, "Down in Yon Forest."

The program includes a number of carols to be included in the program for the first time this year. Among them are "Wasn't That a Mighty Day," a negro jubilee arranged by R. Nathaniel Dett, and the two Italian carols. The negro Christmas spirituals, "Mary Had a Little Lamb," "To Little Jesus," and "Wasn't That a Mighty Day," will also be sung. Three North American carols, sung for the first time last year, will be repeated this year by special request, "And the Trees Do Moan" (Mountain White); "Stars Lead Us Ever On" (Sioux Indian); and "The Shepherd and the Inn" (Mexican). Some of the carols and spirituals have come to be a traditional part of the annual Christmas music. "Stille Nacht" from among the European carols, and "There Are Angels Hov'ring Round," "Rise Up, Shepherd, and Follow," "Glory to That New-born King," and "Go Tell It on the Mountain," from among the negro spirituals, are included in this group. The concert will be under the direction of W. Kemper Harrell, director of music at Spelman and Morehouse Colleges. He will be assisted by W. Laurence James, Naomah Williams Maize, both of whom are members of the Morehouse-Spelman music faculty.

German Cotton Deal Before Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—(UP). Secretary of State Cordell Hull has put up to President Roosevelt the decision on whether the United States will enter into a b-veter deal for the sale of 500,000 bales of American cotton to Germany, it was indicated at the state department today.

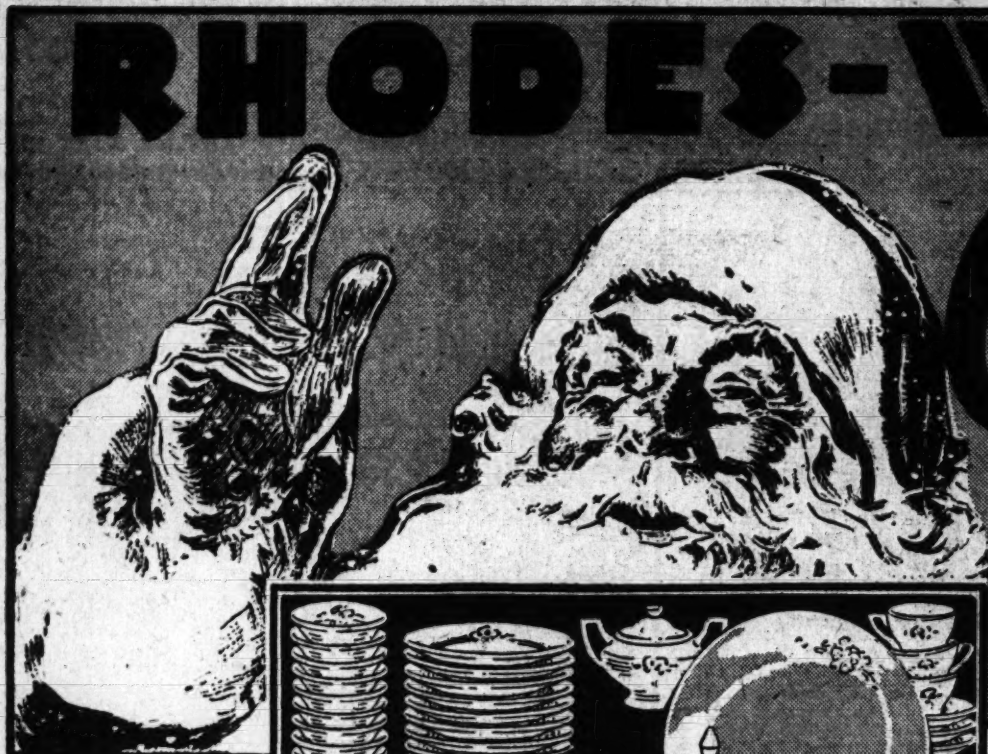

Hull, who has bitterly opposed all barter contracts between nations, considering them inimical to his own "Takes trading" policies, referred all inquiries today concerning the proposed barter deal to the White House. Hull refused even to admit that the details of the proposed deal had been referred to him. In passing the buck to the President for decision, Hull has practically placed the President in a position of having to arbitrate between the two chief promoters of American foreign trade—Hull himself, and George N. Peek, special adviser to the President on foreign trade.

New York Celtics Scheduled To Play Tech in Basketball Opener

VETERAN PROS TO COME HERE ON JANUARY 9

Mundorff Working on Schedule for Jackets, Comprising 15 Games.

By Jimmy Jones.

The New York Celtics, still the greatest attraction in the way of a professional basketball team on the road, will come to Atlanta on the night of January 9 to open Georgia Tech's 1935 season, according to present plans of Coach Roy Mundorff of the Jackets' quintet.

"We have the Celtics scheduled for that date and chances are it will be our first game, also, since that seems about the earliest date we will be able to play," Mundorff stated yesterday.

15 GAMES PLANNED.

The Tech coach, who has been busy completing a program embracing some 15 games for his basketball team, stated that he expected to have the schedule ready for announcement in a week. It will conclude most of the outstanding conference games and probably a brace of games with Jimmy Slocumb's Mercer team.

"The game with the Celtics will do our boys a lot of good, especially from the standpoint of passing, since the Celtics are pastmasters at that," Roy added.

SPECULATIVE.

The Tech team this year is largely speculative, but Hyder, sophomore center, with a keen eye for the hoop, has greatly strengthened the squad and there are two veteran forwards returning in Katz and Woodall and a pair of experienced guards in Billy Glenn and Stacey.

Lawrence Hays, sophomore guard candidate, has joined the squad. Hays, who was a member of the Georgia Tech team last year, will hurt the team's substituting strength some for Center, a former Savannah player, was aggressive and a good shot. Center decided to quit school Thursday night.

SOUTHERN VOTES TO ADD 6 TEAMS

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 15.—(AP)—The Southern conference today opened the door through which a half-dozen colleges hoped to step to membership in the league.

Pettingers were cautioned not to be too optimistic. Passing by a 9-to-1 vote a resolution to limit the membership of the conference to 16 members, instead of 10, as now constituted, the conference emphasized it had in mind no particular six schools and that no new members could be taken in until next year. No promise was made any additions would be made then.

INCREASE TO 16. The proposal that the league's membership limits be increased to 16, a recommendation of the committee on colleges that was argued far into Saturday morning by an executive committee that gathered Friday night, found surprising strength on the college floor. Only Maryland voted "no."

Moving swiftly and harmoniously the conference disposed of the membership question, voted to continue the ban on the broadcasting of games in which Southern conference teams participate, agreed to permit transfers who are graduates of accredited junior colleges play on varsity teams their first year at the institution to which they transfer, and eliminated the 24-hour rule, thus giving the colleges wider jurisdiction in determining who shall play on varsity teams.

VOTE OF CONFIDENCE. Then the conference gave a vote of confidence to the officers by re-electing the entire slate: Forest Bleicher, of Washington and Lee, president; A. W. Hobbs, of North Carolina, vice president; and William Couper, of V. M. I., secretary-treasurer.

The treasurer's report, showed a balance of $8,010.73. Raleigh was voted the conference basketball tournament, February 28-March 1; Virginia, boxing, February 22-23; outdoor track, Duke, May 17-18; and North Carolina the indoor track meet, March 9.

Here's Babe Ruth, greatest of all hitters, with the bat boys at the Japanese stadium in Tokyo, where the American team, captained and managed by the Babe, played a game in the long series scheduled in Japan. They were seen by a half-million people. The Babe, who looks like an old Japanese idol, is wearing one of the boys' caps.

GIANTS, BEARS HEAD PRO STARS

By Eddie Brists.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Three teams made a clean sweep of positions on the All-National Professional Football league eleven, announced today.

The coach who made the selections picked five New York Giants, new league champions; four members of the former championship Chicago Bears; and two Detroit Lions, runners-up in the western section of the circuit.

The Giants placed Red Badgro, Hein, Kopeck, Badgro and Nagurski, end; guard; Mel Hein, center; and Ken Strong, halfback.

The Bears came through with two backs, Bronco Nagurski, and Beattie Feathers. They also contributed Kopych at guard and Bill Hewitt, an end.

TWO DETROITERS. The two Detroiters named to the mythical eleven are Earl (Dutch) Clark, at quarter, and Christensen, at end.

Five of the first eleven—Hewitt, Hein, Kopeck, Badgro and Nagurski—were selected on last year's team and two others—Gibson and Strong—were on the 1933 second team. Clark was the only player who was on the 1933 team and who was also on the 1934 team.

There were few points of dispute among the coaches, but one or two of the boys made the first team by the skin of their teeth. Badgro held his flank post by one vote over Harry Ebling, of Detroit.

There was only one tie. Ed Kawa, of the Bears, and Ned Braggar, of Green Bay, deadlocked for second team center.

Here are the first and second teams.

shot them back in. From then on it was a different game.

Mickal began zipping passes to Barrett, L. S. U. end and crack throw receiver, and worked the ball to the 4-yard line. From there Mickal slipped a flat one to Barrett over the goal. Seago converted.

With the game end nearing, and ten Mickal on the field, Seago took the snap, tore around left end for 39 yards and a touchdown that knotted the count.

Seago came through again with an extra point, and the game was won. Oregon had the best of it in first down, 14 to 12.

pushed and shoved around as Louisiana State did in beating the Webfoot from the northwest.

From the first play until the middle of the second quarter the Louisiana State team was subjected to a power-battering and a dazing air attack that made them look bad.

13-0 AT HALP. Oregon's emerald-jerseyed warriors, playing smart, fast football, and led by the dashing backs, Mickal and Van Vliet, hammered and passed to touchdowns in the first and second periods to lead L. S. U. 13 to 0.

After their first touchdown, Van Vliet, after being skidded around left end for 3 yards, after an air bombardment and line smashes put the ball in striking range, the Webfoot tried to pass for extra point instead of kicking.

A pass by Van Vliet fell dead behind the goal.

Early in the second period, Van Vliet, as if to make up for the missed point, broke through left guard from the Louisiana 20-yard line and dodged State tacklers to the goal. This time Walker, substitute end, kicked the point.

BIFF GIVES ADVICE. Then Captain "Biff" Jones, State coach, after sending in his reserves who fighting viciously, kept the Oregonians at bay for a while, gave his first-stringers some bench pointers

Here's Babe 'At Home,' Just One of the Boys!

By Ralph McGill.

He looks like a solemn old idol—does The Babe—in a bat boy's cap, squatting up there in the picture. And are those Japanese boys happy about it all—sitting there with The Babe himself?

They are the bat boys. Take a look at them. They look like our kids—except for the oriental eyes. Those uniforms look like ours.

Baseball is the national game here and in Japan. The Babe and his American ball club have done much to popularize America and Americans in his tour.

The Babe has apparently reached the end of the row in America. His legs are failing. His swing is good and his batting eye is keen as ever. But the old legs get knots in them.

Baseball ages one. The Babe is 41 years old and that is prime. But not in baseball. The race is to the swift in baseball. And 40-year-old legs won't do.

But the Babe is still the greatest gate attraction in baseball despite the growing shadow which Dixie Dean casts across the scene.

He and his team drew about a half-million people in Japan and the tour was most successful.

His great drawing power awoke the major league owners to the fact that he is still a big attraction. Until the Japanese tour their had been a discreet silence about the Babe's future.

The Babe won't remain in Japan. But he could. His tremendous drawing power aroused a syndicate there to offer him a contract for three years to head the Japanese baseball league.

The contract was one with a great salary for the big fellow. It was a slightly minding step.

That picture, though, gets one. It is an old, old act with the Babe. He has been pictured thousands of times with bat boys. His slightly smug countenance has peered forth from countless newspaper pages.

The boys follow him everywhere as he, a slightly fat Pied Piper, trots on and off the fields of the world with a slightly minding step.

Baseball—the great international good will medicine—especially if the Babe—hero of news reels and crowds over all the world—is there posing with the bat boys, signing autographs, hitting home runs.

Salute, Babe. You are a great guy!

ONE OF BEST. The club figures to award between eight and ten turkeys and an equal number of fruit cakes. It will be one of the best event of the year.

Shooters are asked to register today at the club or sign up with Al Press at Beck & Gregg during the week.

This is necessary in order that the program may be arranged before next Sunday. All shooters will receive handicaps.

But today is the day to try to win a ham. And the competition is certain to be of the same keen order of past events at the club.

FLASHES DEFEAT Buford Team, 19-0

The East Lake Flashes added another victory to their perfect record by defeating the Buford Blue Wave, 19 to 0, at Buford.

The first score of the game came in the first quarter, when G. Johnson, fullback, bucked through the center of the line for 11 yards. The two teams battled on even terms and the half ended with the score 6 to 0 in favor of the Flashes. In the third period a 10-yard pass to B. Bryan on Buford's 10-yard line, resulted in another touchdown, as he crossed the line standing up.

In the last quarter, after a 40-yard run by G. Dinkler, the Flashes played well for the third and final score. B. Jarvis bucked the line for the extra point. Whiteing, and Rogers played best for the losers.

Coast Boys Write Stanford Into First Place Against 'Bama

BOB GRAYSON AND HAMILTON UNSTOPPABLE

Indian Line and Ends Are Touted; Tide Strong, Too.

By Ralph McGill.

Alabama's big football team is now in second place out in the land of transplanted and itching palms.

The boys have written the big Stanford team into first place as the days move on and the Rose Bowl game between the two draws closer on the football horizon.

The impression grows on the coast that the Stanford team has a defense which no one can crack and that in Ross Hamilton and Bobby Grayson they have two backs who are superior to Dixie Howell and any other back the Alabama team will offer.

Stanford's pass defense has been good and so the coast experts have figured it out that Stanford's line and ends will halt the Crimson running game and that the backs will break up passes.

GRAYSON GOOD.

And that Grayson, who was good last year, is not to be stopped in any one game in this season.

That is the line of reasoning offered by the coast people.

But the fact remains that Alabama has a line. And it is a good line. And it will open some holes in that Stanford front.

Jimmy Angelich and Dixie Howell are very good halfbacks at knifing through a big line. And they should be able to gain. In figuring the Stanford line the coast people overlook the fact that Alabama also has a line. And one which is three men, the entire left side, make the All-Conference team.

Alabama's attack is made more versatile by virtue of the fact that the two ends, Hutson and Bryant, are also good ball carriers.

And the pass game, with Hutson and Smith as fine receivers, is also good.

GOOD RESERVES.

Alabama's backfield reserves are good, strong men. Alabama is not as good with reserves but still a good football team.

Bob Ed Morrow suffered a smash-over nose in the Crimson-Saturday game at Tusculoo, the first injury since the regular season closed. The big guard will be able to play but will not scrimmage again before the game.

Now that the first hysteria has died out, the impression is the game will be a close, hard-fought one.

I still string with Alabama. I think the Crimson Tide will be smarter, faster and will have the edge in spirit.

And will win the football game.

Meanwhile Bill Peoples, the Southern Pacific agent who has traveled 80,000 miles to the coast and back with southern football teams, reports that 250 people will be aboard the first train which pulls out. It will leave Friday morning.

Peoples will then double back and pick up two more specials from Birmingham, leaving on December 26.

'Bama's Superlatives Run High in Football

Tide Has Had Six Unbeaten Teams, 11 All-Americans; Tech Is Hardest Foe.

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Dec. 15.—In the 41 years that the University of Alabama football teams have engaged in competition, they have played in 316 games. The winners of the Crimson and White have emerged the victor 216 times, have been defeated in 80 games and tied 20 times.

The Crimson and White teams have scored in this length of time 7,516 points to their opponents' 2,417. This is over three times as many. The highest score by an Alabama team was made in 1922 when the Tide defeated Marlon, 41 to 0. The worst defeat suffered by the Crimson and White was in 1907 when Sewanee defeated Alabama, 54 to 0.

Alabama has had six undefeated seasons—1897, 1906, 1925, 1926, 1930, 1934. The Tide has played in the Rose Bowl three times, having won twice and tied once. In 1925, 'Bama defeated the University of Washington, 20 to 10. In 1926, the Tide broke even with the Stanford Indians, 7 and 7. In 1930, the Crimson and White banner was held high over Washington State, 24 to 0.

COMPLETE ALL-AMERICAN.

Alabama boasts through the years of play an All-American team. At ends, Don Hutson and Wu Winslett; at tackles, Bill Lee and Freddy Sington; at guard, Tom Hupke and Bill Buckler; at center, Shorty Probst. The backfield would be "Pooley" Hutson.

TECH TOUGHEST FOE.

Georgia Tech is the only rival of the University of Alabama who can claim more victories than defeats. The Atlanta team has defeated the Tide 10 times to 8 victories for the 'Bama boys, while two of their games have ended in ties.

The Crimson and White holds the Vanderbilt Georgia, Kentucky, Ole Mississippi and Mississippi State. The largest margin held by the Tide is that over the Kentucky Whirls, whom they have met 13 times and have defeated 12 times to one loss.

The most points scored by a Tide team was made by the 1929 Crimson and White aggregation when they scored 377 points. The Tide of 1933 scored 300; 1923 accounted for 300; 1925 is next with 296. The 1934 edition of the Tide follows close behind with a total of 237 points made this year.

SIX.

In the last 10 years the 'Bama teams have won the Southern championship four times—1924, 1925, 1926 and 1930. They have won the Southeastern championship twice in 1933 and 1934. Alabama holds a co-claim to the national championship with Notre Dame in 1930, has won two Rose Bowl games and one tie out in that annual classic.

S. S. A. A. Teams To Play Friday

Games in the American School Amateur Athletic Association scheduled at the Y. W. C. A. Friday night will start at 7 o'clock, one half-hour later than the usual playing time.

The association opened its schedule last week with close competition. Some of the teams were playing with scant preparation.

The boys' division Central Baptist Joy Class seems to have met with stiffer competition than they anticipated in the Lutheran church when they barely scored out to win by 31 to 30. Pals Class came in with a bang to smother an unprepared English Avenue club but the individual stars on the English roster performed better ball when they get better acquainted with their plays.

Imman Park, although they found little difficulty in their first game, will have to hustle to compete with the Fulton Bag girls.

The best game scheduled next Friday will likely be the Joy Class-Pals Class conflict. Both are from the same Sunday school and are bitter enemies.

THE SCHEDULE:

Fulton Bag vs. Mt. Vernon (girls), 7 p. m.

Imman Park vs. American Fore (girls), 7:45 p. m.

Lutheran Church vs. English Avenue Baptist (boys), 8:30 p. m.

NORTHWESTERN OUSTS HANLEY

EVANSTON, Ill., Dec. 15.—(AP)—For a man whose resignation came hand coach at Iowa, who filled the western University's gridiron affairs today with more bonquets than many a coach has won for turning out a championship team.

Hanley's announcement merely made official something that has been known for several days, but he stepped out of the job, after eight years, with nothing but praise from Dr. Walter Dill Scott, the alumni, athletes and students.

In accepting the resignation, forced by opposition from within the faculty, Dr. Scott characterized Hanley as "one of the greatest football coaches in America," and assured him of support in quest of a position for his record.

Hanley declared he left without rancor toward anyone connected with the university, and with no apologies for his record.

It was reported that Ozzie Solem, Northwestern's coach, had been offered the job, but he declined it.

Northwestern's coach, however, also said to be under consideration were Dan X. Bible, of Nebraska, and George Veenker, of Iowa State College.

Dodgers Drop Nap Rucker As Scout

ROSWELL, Ga., Dec. 15.—(AP)—George N. (Nap) Rucker, veteran major league pitcher and scout, was out of the big-league baseball picture today after 27 years of campaigning.

Rucker said officials of the Brooklyn club of the National league, for which he scouted 17 years and pitched 10, had notified him they would be unable to renew his contract.

"I guess the owners were finding it a little tough and had to cut down on finances," he said. "I am perfectly happy over the thing. They've done lots for me and I certainly wouldn't like to say anything against the boys up there."

One of the National league's greatest left-handers, Nap has devoted his time to corraling promising timber for the Dodgers along with another old-timer, Larry Sutton. Between seasons he operates his flour and feed mill here.

FUTURE UNCERTAIN.

About his future connection with the pastime, Rucker is uncertain.

"How are you going to keep away from it?" he queried when asked if he was through for good. "If I'm not officially connected with some club, I'll be out on the field next summer watching some of the games, in Atlanta or elsewhere."

Considered one of the game's keenest judges of baseball talent, Nap gathered into the Dodger fold such players as Danny Yancey, Hank DeBerry, Al Lopez and others who have taken their place among the stars of the diamond.

STARTED WITH CRACKERS.

Rucker's first venture into baseball came back in 1904 with the Atlanta club. He pitched three games and was "canned," he said.

Then he moved over to Augusta, Ga., on the muddy Savannah river, and pitched for a part of 1905 and 1906, and from there he went to Brooklyn the next year.

Now, after 27 years with one club, he wonders how strong will be the appeal to return to the diamond next season. He said he had received no offers as yet.

It seems strange, though, to be on the outside looking in, he concluded.

CROWD ATTENDS FLORIDA OPENER

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 15.—(AP)—Florida's 92-day racing season opened today with the nerve-ringing thrill of a neck-and-neck finish as Philip Sanfor's Candescant romped home winner in the first event at Tropical park.

A cosmopolitan crowd of 10,000, drawn from here, there and yonder by the prospects of a record winter season, swarmed in the grandstand and clubhouse. Sunny skies and a hard, fast track did their part for the gala opening, while a fall nip in the air had the thoroughbreds on edge.

Long lines formed at the perimutuel windows and an early estimate had $110,000 bet on the seven races.

Kiska, owned by Fred Alger Jr., stepped off a mile in 1:38.5 to win the Coral Gables handicap, feature event. He paid holders of a $2 ticket $8.20 for his whirlwind victory over C. J. Biddy's Bandwagon.

The crowd exceeded expectations and had exhausted the supply of programs early, necessitating a rush order for more.

Meanwhile, some 1,500 horses awaited a place on later cards in the Tropical meeting, scheduled to last until January 16, the open age at March 11 after nearby Hialeah park concludes its season. The second part of the Tropical program is to end April.

With Tropical stables filled, many owners had their horses in the Hialeah stables, ready to transfer them to the track in vans on the days they are carded.

Today's opening was a full two weeks ahead of previous years as the Gables Racing Association, headed by William Dwyer, gambled on the early tourist rush at Miami making the venture pay.

Candescant paid $5.90 on a $2 ticket to win. He tired at March but was able to beat off the stretch drive of C. A. Hanson's Gallie. A rank outsider, J. Kovinsky's Marcella H. came through in the closing race to pay the longest odds of the day, $82.20 for a $2 ticket.

gathered 10 points in the last quarter only to be nosed out by a close margin.

NEW MANAGERS TO TAKE REINS IN FIVE CITIES

Southern League Will Start 1935 Season With 5 New Pilots.

By Kenneth Gregory.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

When the Southern Association baseball teams face the barrier next spring to commence the race for the 1935 pennant, the managerial reins of five of the eight clubs will be in new hands.

Only New Orleans, the 1934 champion, Birmingham and Knoxville will spring along with the same pilots who directed the play of their teams through the past season.

Here are the men who will be in charge when the chase starts:

Atlanta—Eddie Moore, succeeding Spencer Abbott.

Knoxville—Lee Head.

New Orleans—Larry Gilbert.

Chattanooga—Mule Shirley, succeeding Zina Heck.

Birmingham—Clyde Milan.

Little Rock—Doc Prothro, succeeding Johnny Monroe.

Head, a peppery and dependable catcher who managed the Knoxville Smokies last season, was resigned to a one-year contract. He will be playing his third year with the Smokies.

The New Orleans Pelicans, conquerors of Nashville's Vols in a play-off for the 1934 pennant and triumphant in the Dixie Series, will be directed again by the veteran pilot, Larry Gilbert. At Birmingham Clyde Milan, another veteran, will return to manage the Barons.

After a successful seven-year stand with the Memphis Chickies, Doc Prothro resigned and later was elected to pilot the Little Rock Travelers. He signed a three-year contract and plans to give up active playing unless "an emergency arises."

PROTHRO A WINNER.

During his managerial career at Memphis, Prothro's teams won the pennant in 1930, finished second in 1928, 1932 and 1933, and was third in 1931 and 1934. The Chickies were never out of the first division while Prothro was in charge.

One of the surprise selections was that of Fred Hoffman, a former New York Yankee catcher and later manager of the San Francisco club, to direct the Memphis team. His contract is for one year. Hoffman plans to catch at least a third of the Chickies' games.

COLGATE TANK.

Nation's Top-Ranking Bowlers Enter U. S. Sweepstakes Here

NICK TRONSKY, ASTOR CLARKE HEAD ENTRIES

Joe Harrison, Ranked No. 1 in Country, Will Compete.

By Jack Troy.

The new year will bring a new significance to Atlanta bowling, which has shown a healthy growth in keeping with its years, and January 5, 1935, will be a date to chronicle as the inaugural of major league duckpin activities in the gateway city.

Atlanta's Junior Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the United States Sweepstakes, which brings in new year bowling with a flourish and on an important scale.

First of all, consider the top-ranking stars of the nation already entered—Nick Tronsky, Williamant, Conn., considered by the national duckpin bowling congress as the most valuable bowler in the world. He established three world's records when he won the United States Sweepstakes in 1933 at Richmond, with a score of 2,101. He holds the high 10-game set—1,429; the high 15-game set, 2,101; high 50-game set, 6,448; high season average, 127.37.

1934 WINNER.

Tronsky won the 1934 United States individual national duckpin bowling congress at Baltimore, rolling 453 in a three-game set.

Jack White, the New Haven (Conn.) Express, teammate of Tronsky, and ranked No. 2 in the country by the national congress.

Washington's great entry includes Astor Clarke, United States Sweepstakes winner last year, with a score of 2,036, at Washington; Joe Harrison, No. 1 ranking bowler in the nation for 1934, and Ed Essey, ranked No. 9.

Clarke and Lorraine Gull set a mixed doubles world's record in the southern mixed doubles here last spring.

Connecticut sends, besides Tronsky, Bozo Dente, a consistent tournament star.

From Baltimore will come Ray Barnes, United States Sweepstakes winner in 1932 and a high-ranking bowler, and Ray Von Dreile, the "iron man." He bowled the most number of league games of any high average bowler in the country last year.

FIVE-LEAGUE BOWLER. Von Dreile bowled in three leagues in Baltimore and two in Washington each week, making 40-mile trips. Billy Arnold is entered from Annapolis, Md. He won the Dixie Sweepstakes this year.

Ota Ehlers, owner of the Tivoli alley, in Baltimore, whose average runs around 115 in the Baltimore major league, will drive down with his wife and friends.

John S. Blick, proprietor of the bowling center here, and Carl Tidwell, are the latest free entry winners. They won a doubleheader last week, and Johnny Aloysius Ross, in the select group of entry winners.

Many more national stars are coming for the United States Sweepstakes, Atlanta's first major league duckpin attraction, and it might be wise to buy tickets early. There will be special stands but seats will be at a premium.

The Junior Chamber will have charge of ticket sales, and the game will be started in the near future.

Down the Alleys So great is the improvement in the averages of the bowlers in the new Coca-Cola Club Duck Pin League that interest has grown to such a point that the weekly bowling outings each Friday evening. Two additional leagues were needed to accommodate the overflow of the Coca-Cola bowlers last Friday.

Bryant, Lee, McCash, Miller, McClatchey, Allen, Hill, Lamb, Wilson, Donaldson were high, last week.

Bowling games of 117-142-153, Walter E. Lawson amassed his first 400 or better series of the new season with 412 for his total. Although it is the first to top the 400 mark, Walter has had a couple in the 300s and a large number in the 350s, to keep his average atop the innumerable group of bowlers of the city.

Tom Cerniglia is missed from the Friday night league games of the First National bank, but expects to be back "in harness" after the holidays.

During Gariglia's absence, Smith, Lynch, Herman, Greiner, Jones, Purcell, Dailley, Sargent, McElroy, Kelly, Kirk, Greene, Hardy, Goughlin, Barton, Crowell, Lanier, Nix, Carson, Faine, Sunnergill and many others have been topping a little lower for games better than 100.

Paul Perry, president of the Commercial Club Duck Pin league, believes that the race in the commercial will be even closer than the eight teams had thought after the fourth week of play. With the first half near at hand, five teams are battling for the lead and it is impossible to determine what team will be resting on top when the winner is declared.

In the Anthony Buick Ten Pin league some excellent ten-pin bowlers are being developed in Fuller, Puckett, Lehmann, Wellington, Beach, Compton, Davis, Hargett, Scott, Laro, Riley, Smith, Watkins, Rucker, R. Ehlers, Brooks, B. Robbins, Robinson. Ehlers was high for last Thursday with a 200 game.

S. Cummings, vice president of the Capital City Duck Pin league had a big set of 349 Wednesday and was instrumental in aiding his team in winning the big team game prize of a case of old South beer with the team total of 516.

REVIVE LOOP. SELMA, Ala., Dec. 15.—(UP)—Maurice Bloch, former president of the Selma club in the Southeastern league, tonight said Walter Morris, organizer of the National Association was in interest of revival of the loop. Montgomery, Selma, Columbus, Pensacola, Mobile and Macon were recommended as probable entries.

Two More Entry Winners

John Blick, left, whose alleys here will be the scene of the United States sweepstakes January 5, and Carl Tidwell, one of the leading bowlers in the city, last week won free entries in preliminary sweepstakes. There have been three winners to date—Blick, Tidwell and Aloysius Sosong. Leading bowlers in the nation will be here for the one-day event.

Crippled Kids Injuries Hurt Get $5,020 Triangle Five

The football game between the Tech and Georgia freshmen, played here on Thanksgiving Day, drew 6,215 paid admissions and netted $5,020.50 for the Scottish Rite hospital fund for treatment of crippled children.

This amount, while somewhat below that derived from last year's game, was considered excellent in view of the unfavorable winter conditions under which the game was played.

The Scottish Rite game committee, in making public the auditor's report on the proceeds, stated that it felt "that the public, which has responded so generously in supporting this game should have definite information about its proceeds," and added that "while the total admissions were 6,215, quite a number of tickets were sold at 50 and 25 cents with $1 being the price for reserved seats."

Following is the official report from the accounting firm of Haskins & Sells, on the game:

Messrs. William C. Wardlaw, Atlanta, Ga.
F. M. Spratlin,
Committee, Benefit Game, the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sirs: We have examined the records relating to the football game played at Grant field on Thanksgiving Day, November 29, 1934, by the freshman teams of the Georgia School of Technology and the University of Georgia for the benefit of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

The gate receipts amounted to $5,020.50, representing 6,215 admissions. All tickets printed for the game were accounted for. Tickets were sold at the prices stated thereon and the total amount received from the sales is included in the foregoing amount of gate receipts.

Following is a summary of the admissions and the gate receipts:

	Adm't	Am't
East and West stands, 3,905	at $1	$3,905.00
South stand, 2,152	at 50	1,076.00
Students, 158	at 25	39.50
Total gate receipts		$5,020.50

Certified checks in the amount of $5,020.50 were delivered to the secretary of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

(Signed) HASKINS & SELLS.
The committee, composed of William C. Wardlaw, Tom Law and Frank Spratlin, also made public a letter, in which it expressed gratitude to the public for its contribution to the success of the game, the entire proceeds of which will go to the hospital fund. It follows:

"On behalf of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children and the committee having in charge the football game played on Thanksgiving Day, we wish to thank the public for its contribution to the success of the game, the entire proceeds of which will go to the hospital fund. It follows:

"We also want to thank the many individuals who helped in this work would make too long a list, but special thanks are due the athletic associations, churches and the schools of two institutions, and the newspapers and particularly the sports writers, as the game could not have been possible without their help."

"We also want to thank the United Refining Company, the Coca-Cola Company, the Atlanta Ford dealers, the Guthman Laundry and Mullaney for the ads which appeared in the program. The amount received from these ads together with some personal donations paid the entire expenses of the game, which enabled the hospital to receive the entire amount realized from the sale of tickets, as will be seen from the letter of Messrs. Haskins & Sells, certified public accountants, who donated their services in auditing these accounts, for which service we also express our thanks."

"We would also like to express our appreciation to the public who so generously supported the game."

"All should feel fully repaid for their contributions in the realization that they are having a part in correcting the deformities and relieving the suffering of many crippled children who would otherwise be denied proper surgical and medical attention."

W. C. WARDLAW,
President, Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

INDIANS BEST AMERICAN, SAYS HORNSBY

Rajah Can't See a Repeat Victory for Mickey's Tigers.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 15.—(P)—Rogers Hornsby regards Cleveland's Indians as the strongest club in the American league and he doesn't expect Detroit's Tigers to win the 1935 pennant.

Back home from the major league meeting in New York, the Rajah today discussed the prospects of his St. Louis Browns and the others in the circuit.

"Mind you, I don't say the Cleveland club is going to win the pennant," he explained. "But it is the strongest club in the league."

It has a fine defense and the best hitting strength in the circuit. Besides that the pitching staff is about the best, so what else does it need? Why didn't they have a good year in 1934, but if he comes back next season, the Indians ought to win the pennant—if the strongest club ought to win.

And why didn't he expect the Tigers to repeat?

"Everybody had a good year for Mickey Cochrane," he said. "That's what made it possible for the Tigers to win the pennant last year. It was the infielders, all clicking at once that gave Detroit the championship. And it ain't in the books for a club to have that kind of luck two years in succession."

"But I will say for the Tigers that the team had the best spirit in the league. Mickey had them hustling all the time and that's another thing that won for them."

The Boston Red Sox, despite Tom Yawkey's lavish spending, "won't go anywhere," he predicted, "because you have to have a good first baseman and a good second baseman. And you have to have a club to have that kind of luck two years in succession."

Yanks, Senators Off. New York and Washington, he believes, are on the down grade, each with too many old players "who are about ready to crack up."

The present, he believes, will be in the person of Alonzo Williams, a big, lanky youth from the plains of Texas, who can really throw the baseball.

He's young and green, but he has the stuff and the steadiness to become a real pitcher. He may be the 'dark horse' of our staff next year or maybe the same kind of a surprise that 'Dutch' Schmidt was last year," Eddie went on to say while indulging in one of his periodical fancies.

If young Al Williams, the Texas broncho buster, does bob up as a dark-horse and is as good a pitcher as Bill Schmidt, another unheralded rookie, was last summer for the Crackers, Santa Claus will have visited Eddie Moore's house.

Schmidt, who cost the Crackers nothing more than a one-way railroad ticket from California and a little money for hamburgers, won 17 games and lost 12 for the Crackers last year and was considered the prize rookie of the league.

YEARS OLD. Williams, who is only 19 years old, six feet, three inches tall, and weighs around 200 pounds, may be the counterpart of Schmidt. He has a lot of that old "old power" which is just another baseball idiom for speed, good control and a lot of coolness for a rookie.

Manager Moore, after taking over the direction of the club at the end of the season, used Williams in a few games and liked his work.

Williams, who first appeared with the Crackers in the spring at Macon, Ga., hailed from Waxahachie, Texas, which is the home town of Paul Richards, the young catcher for the New York Giants. Richards, having been a friend of Earl Mann's at Hartford, recommended Williams to the Crackers and all they paid for him was a one-way ticket from Waxahachie, which makes him come cheaper even than did Bill Schmidt.

SHOWED UP WELL. Spencer Abbott looked at Williams briefly in spring camp at Macon, liked his speed but considered him a little too far away. He brought the youngster to Atlanta with him, however, and later Joe Palmisano found him a job pitching for Lanett, Ala., which has a club in the Chattahoochee Valley league. He pitched regularly there and showed improvement.

The boy was without previous professional experience when Spencer Abbott stuck him to relieve in a game with Little Rock late in August and he got credit for the victory. Later on Eddie Moore stuck him in a few more games and the Texas seemed to be the steadiest of the late season rookies, excepting Chester Martin, the son of a southerner, who looks like a sure-fire winner next year.

ROOKIES LOOK GOOD. Incidentally, the Crackers' rookie pitcher crop for 1935 is an excellent one. In addition to Schmidt, who remains in the rookie classification for another year, there are Williams, Martin, West, Higbe, Cobb, Durham and Hayes, all youngsters of promise, although Hayes will be an A man.

Joe Palmisano, the Cracker catcher, is a big booster for Williams and agrees with Moore in his ability. He and Martin can come through as Bill Schmidt did last year, to help out the veterans Jim Lindsey and Lynn Nelson, the Crackers will make a staff, despite the loss of Harry Kelley.

WON GAME, 34-0. That afternoon we played and defeated Washington State 34-0. The same night we adjourned to Coconut Grove, at the Ambassador hotel to break training amid the music of Gus Arnheim's band featuring Bing Crosby.

We left January 5 for Alabama. One stop in El Paso, Texas, and a trip to El Paso, Mexico, and our sightseeing was over.

We were welcomed in Houston, New Orleans and Birmingham by crowds. But the big welcome came at Tusculoo. A group of students pulled us to school on a wagon where a mass meeting gave us a royal salute. And the climax to the occasion and trip came when our president made his speech and concluded by saying "Classes will meet at 10 a. m."

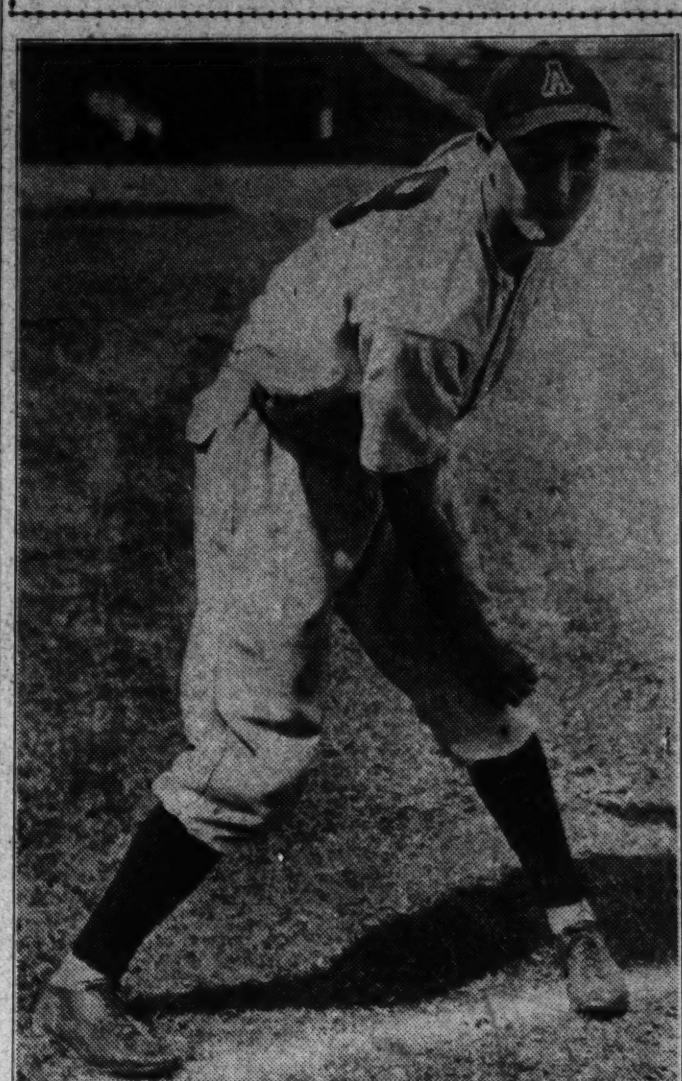

What a thrill I landed with that sure skies, movie stars, trips, a victory to find myself behind a "History of Philosophy" and feeling very unprepared. So ended our trip. Good night, Crimson Tide!

Cracker 'Dark Horse'

That's what Manager Eddie Moore is saying about Al Williams (above), strapping six-foot Texas, who will be one of the promising Cracker rookies to be taken to spring training camp. Williams, a 19-year-old right-hander, hails from Waxahachie, Texas, and is considered an excellent prospect by Manager Moore. He showed real ability in the few games he worked for the Crackers at the tail-end of the season. Staff photo.

Moore Eyes Williams As Cracker Hopeful

Big Texas Boy May Be 1935 Rival of Bill Schmidt for Rookie Honors.

By Jimmy Jones.

Manager Eddie Moore, of the Atlanta Crackers, who is an infidel himself, but who knows a lot about pitchers and the art of handling them, is expecting a visit from Santa along about April of 1935.

The present, he believes, will be in the person of Alonzo Williams, a big, lanky youth from the plains of Texas, who can really throw the baseball.

He's young and green, but he has the stuff and the steadiness to become a real pitcher. He may be the 'dark horse' of our staff next year or maybe the same kind of a surprise that 'Dutch' Schmidt was last year," Eddie went on to say while indulging in one of his periodical fancies.

If young Al Williams, the Texas broncho buster, does bob up as a dark-horse and is as good a pitcher as Bill Schmidt, another unheralded rookie, was last summer for the Crackers, Santa Claus will have visited Eddie Moore's house.

Schmidt, who cost the Crackers nothing more than a one-way railroad ticket from California and a little money for hamburgers, won 17 games and lost 12 for the Crackers last year and was considered the prize rookie of the league.

YEARS OLD. Williams, who is only 19 years old, six feet, three inches tall, and weighs around 200 pounds, may be the counterpart of Schmidt. He has a lot of that old "old power" which is just another baseball idiom for speed, good control and a lot of coolness for a rookie.

Manager Moore, after taking over the direction of the club at the end of the season, used Williams in a few games and liked his work.

Williams, who first appeared with the Crackers in the spring at Macon, Ga., hailed from Waxahachie, Texas, which is the home town of Paul Richards, the young catcher for the New York Giants. Richards, having been a friend of Earl Mann's at Hartford, recommended Williams to the Crackers and all they paid for him was a one-way ticket from Waxahachie, which makes him come cheaper even than did Bill Schmidt.

SHOWED UP WELL. Spencer Abbott looked at Williams briefly in spring camp at Macon, liked his speed but considered him a little too far away. He brought the youngster to Atlanta with him, however, and later Joe Palmisano found him a job pitching for Lanett, Ala., which has a club in the Chattahoochee Valley league. He pitched regularly there and showed improvement.

The boy was without previous professional experience when Spencer Abbott stuck him to relieve in a game with Little Rock late in August and he got credit for the victory. Later on Eddie Moore stuck him in a few more games and the Texas seemed to be the steadiest of the late season rookies, excepting Chester Martin, the son of a southerner, who looks like a sure-fire winner next year.

ROOKIES LOOK GOOD. Incidentally, the Crackers' rookie pitcher crop for 1935 is an excellent one. In addition to Schmidt, who remains in the rookie classification for another year, there are Williams, Martin, West, Higbe, Cobb, Durham and Hayes, all youngsters of promise, although Hayes will be an A man.

Joe Palmisano, the Cracker catcher, is a big booster for Williams and agrees with Moore in his ability. He and Martin can come through as Bill Schmidt did last year, to help out the veterans Jim Lindsey and Lynn Nelson, the Crackers will make a staff, despite the loss of Harry Kelley.

WON GAME, 34-0. That afternoon we played and defeated Washington State 34-0. The same night we adjourned to Coconut Grove, at the Ambassador hotel to break training amid the music of Gus Arnheim's band featuring Bing Crosby.

We left January 5 for Alabama. One stop in El Paso, Texas, and a trip to El Paso, Mexico, and our sightseeing was over.

We were welcomed in Houston, New Orleans and Birmingham by crowds. But the big welcome came at Tusculoo. A group of students pulled us to school on a wagon where a mass meeting gave us a royal salute. And the climax to the occasion and trip came when our president made his speech and concluded by saying "Classes will meet at 10 a. m."

What a thrill I landed with that sure skies, movie stars, trips, a victory to find myself behind a "History of Philosophy" and feeling very unprepared. So ended our trip. Good night, Crimson Tide!

SELL-OUT SEEN FOR TOURNEY OF ROSES GAME

Ticket Demand Indicates 85,000 Will See 'Bama, Stanford.

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 15.—(UP)—Sponsors of the Tournament of Roses encounter between Alabama and Stanford in the Rose Bowl of January 1, predicted a sell-out tonight.

So great has been the demand for seats that Graduate Manager Al Masters has so far failed to open the ticket sale to the general public. And the mails continue to pour applications into the ticket office.

With the game a little over two weeks away, it appeared that 85,000 persons would fill the bowl when the Indians and the Crimson Tide from Alabama meet for the mythical national title.

Of course there are plenty of long faces among the students for Stanford alumni of southern California. They read the hospital lists each morning and groan in apprehension.

THE INDIANS. Bobby Grayson, All-American full-back, with ribs in cast; Monk Moscrip, the big end, troubled with sinus after a hard knee; Cab Calloway, with an attack of bronchitis; Stan Anderson, Grayson's understudy, with a slight attack of pneumonia.

On the other hand, bemoaning Keith Topping, Frank Alustia, Bones Hamilton and Jack Brown. "Little wonder the Indian backers are worried, especially when reports from Tusculoo tell that Coach Frank Thomas' squad is in the best physical condition of the year."

None of Coach Tiny Thorndahl is shedding no tears. His staff of trainers and sawbones have assured him all his players, with the possible exception of Anderson, will be ready for action.

The Stanford squad has been going through the miseries of mid-year examinations for the past few weeks, and will not get down to intensive practice until Monday.

FUNDAMENTALS. The Alabama have been drilling on fundamentals and signal sessions against Stanford formations. The squad will roll out of Tusculoo next Friday.

Long-shot guesses have decided there is little chance for rain around New Year's Day, inasmuch as showers have failed to dampen the ardor for a most unusual condition.

The fact that the weathermen have guessed 100 per cent wrong this winter is a failure to dampen the ardor for a most unusual condition.

mission to address the Louisiana team in its dressing room. Jones refused, and Long, according to the report, flew into a towering rage, which Jones resented.

NO STATEMENT. President James M. Smith, to whom the resignation was allegedly handed, denied receiving it. He would not make a statement.

Senator Long said, "I have nothing to say about the matter."

Throughout the football season reports have been current that Jones resented Long's intrusion into what he considered his private life.

There has been no previous rumors of his resignation, however.

During the Tulane-LSU game two weeks ago, Jones was seen to move his seat on the players' bench on two different occasions when the Kingfish attempted to engage him in conversation.

LONG SORRY. It was reported that Long took the Tulane defeat very badly. It was reported also that he was seeking a new coach when Tennessee drubbed the Tigers, the following week.

Major Leagues Experience Dizziest Year in Baseball History

THE DEAN BOYS ARE STANDOUTS IN '34 CAMPAIGN

Collapse of Giants and Senators, Ruth's Farewell Season.

Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of eight articles reviewing the 1934 sports scene. Others on the American Cup races, golf, tennis, racing, track, football and boxing will follow.

By James B. Reston.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—(AP)—You may describe the 1934 major league baseball season with a single word—dizzy!

The description is even better if you use a capital "D," for in the long history of professional baseball no season stands out as a monument to a single player as the 1934 campaign does to Dizzy Dean of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The collapse of the Washington Senators and the New York Giants in 1933; the unexpected rise of the Detroit Tigers under a new manager, Mickey Cochrane; the farewell of Babe Ruth; the retirement of President John Heydler, of the National League, and the great record of Lou Gehrig were all unexpected, but Dizzy's accomplishment of winning 30 games in the regular campaign and two more in the world series remains the outstanding feature of the season.

But even the great Dizzy could not have carried the Cardinals alone. In the last month of the campaign his brother Paul took a regular turn on the mound and his winning streak which was topped by a no-hit, no-run victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

WHO DWARFED GIANTS?
Riddled by injuries, the Washington Senators slipped to the second division in the American League early in the campaign. Black misfortune continued to follow the team which youthful Joe Cronin had elevated to the league championship in 1933. Cronin himself came in for his share of the bad luck, breaking his leg in the month of the campaign.

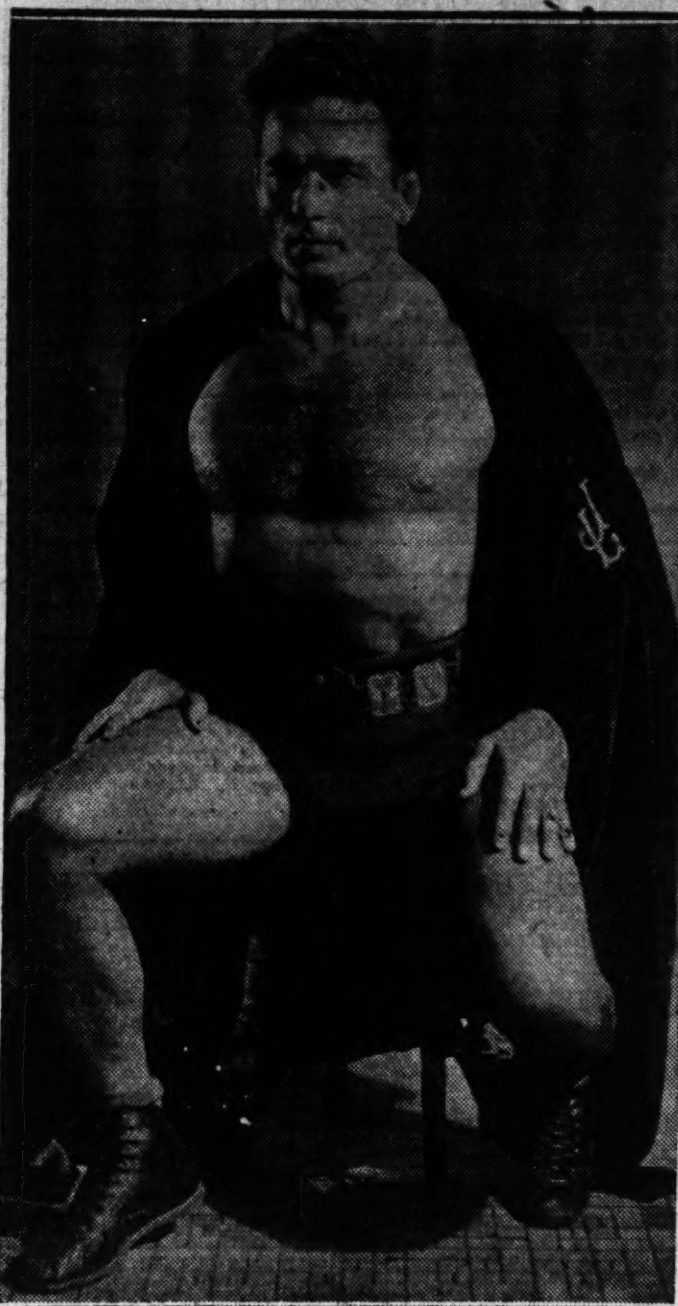

By the expiration of the Giants' season is not simple. Leading the Cards by seven games in the first week of the last month, the New York club lost one game after another in the 1-to-9 grounds, where they were supposed to be unbeatable. If the Giants were to slip, said the critics, they would surely do so on the last road trip, but they did not get past this all right only to see their batting power vanish at home. Mel Ott, who tied with Jim Collins, of the Cards, for the National League home run lead, his worst slump since entering the major, and his teammates went down with him. In the last week of the campaign, when the team had a slight margin, the team's confidence was so completely shattered that defeat seemed inevitable.

BABE PASSES ON.
In years to come, it is probable that the baseball year 1934 will be remembered as the one in which Babe Ruth ended the final game of the most brilliant career in the history of the game. His last swing around the American league with the Yankees was memorable because of the tribute paid him in every city. The winter found the Babe in Japan with a host of American league stars, while news-hawks concerned themselves with possibility of his landing a major league manager's job.

Perhaps the two most interesting figures in the American league campaign were Mickey Cochrane and Lynwood Rowe, of the Detroit club. Put in a difficult position by an over-enthusiastic Detroit following, which somehow believed the addition of Cochrane was sufficient to change the Tigers from a second division team into a pennant winner, Mickey did as well as he could. The pitching of Schoolboy Rowe and the play of an infield composed of Hank Greenberg, Charley Gehringer, Bill Rogell and Marvin Owen, which played together in every game of the campaign except one, combined with Cochrane's play behind the bat and his leadership to give the Tigers the pennant.

FRICK NERXEX.
The retirement of John Arnold Heydler after 16 years as president of the National League came as a distinct surprise, though he was

The Champ Himself

Here is "Thees-a Jem" London, the world's champion grappler and the real Apollo of the ring, who will meet Orville Brown at the Auditorium Tuesday night on a card which includes Chief Chewacki, Dory Roche and a couple of light heavies. London, who recently defeated Everett Marshall and Dick Shikat, has held the title without interruption for almost four years.

BLACK, MAULDIN S. I. J. BATTLES BATTLE MONDAY AARONEAN FIVE

"Sheriff" Black, the knockout artist, from Gainesville, will face a tough customer Monday night when he enters the ring against Gentleman John Mauldin, one of Atlanta's favorites, in the feature match at the Avondale arena.

Black has a string of 21 victories to his credit and is pointing himself for a match for the southern lightweight championship. But he must first reckon with Mauldin, one of the hardest fighters in his path. They will meet in a 90-minute match, two-out-of-three falls.

The semi-windup will bring together Teddy Bittz, Chicago Greek, and Bull Schmidt, a tough fellow in anybody's ring. They will wrestle in a one-hour match.

Smithy Anderson will meet "Nerts" Harbin in a special "handicap" match. Anderson weighs 136 pounds and will try to pin Harbin, who tips the beam at 175, in 25 minutes.

The Avondale arena is conveniently located and is steam heated.

known to have been in ill health for some time. His successor, 40-year-old Ford Frick, former English teacher and New York sports writer, was elevated to office on December 11 at the meeting of the National League officers.

Lou Gehrig, grabbed the major league batting honors just as Dizzy Dean took command of the pitching situation. Lou led the American League in batting with a mark of .363; in batting in runs, 187; in home runs, 49; and in total bases, 406. He has now played in 1,504 games without missing. In the National League, Paul Waner, of the Pirates, topped Bill Terry in the batting column to lead the league with a mark of .362. Paul was also first in runs with 122, and in hits with 217.

Two of the strongest teams of the Jewish Educational Alliance basketball league will open hostilities this afternoon at 8 o'clock when the league, which consists of five senior teams and three junior teams, play on the court on Capitol avenue.

The Davidsen club, which offered plenty of opposition to last year's teams, will face the Nordau team, which has graduated into the senior group, from last year's junior league in the opening game.

In the feature game this afternoon, the strong Aaronson five, last year's champions, will play the S. I. J. club. This game will start at 4 o'clock.

The Jewish Educational Alliance basketball league, under the direction of Barney Mediant, athletic director of the Alliance, will work in co-operation with the Young Judea Council this season.

The junior league will open on December 22.

Harry Robinson and Hyman Kaufman will be officials of the league this year.

Russell, Jonesboro Divide Twin Bill
Russell High's boys' team defeated Jonesboro, 37-26, Saturday night at the Russell court, but the Russell girls were trampled over by Jonesboro ladies to the tune of 31 to 18.

The boys' team will open its N. G. I. C. schedule against Spalding County High, the new member in the league, at the Russell court Tuesday night.

FREDDY PERRY, BEATEN TWICE, MAY TAKE REST

British Star's Performance Against Crawford, Quist Alarms Followers.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Despite his statement that his two recent defeats here were just "slips that pass in the night," Fred J. Perry, of England, world's No. 1 singles tennis player, apparently has reached a point of tennis exhaustion after five years of strenuous campaigning and plans a long rest at the end of his Australian tour.

A few weeks ago he dropped a match to Jack Crawford, top-ranking Australian star, and two days ago he could no better than win two games in three sets from Adrian Quist, Aussie Davis cup player, in the semi-finals for the Victoria cup.

His spirit and flash still are willing, but mentally the black-haired Briton is worn out.

WANTS REST.
"Right now I can't even think clearly about tennis," Perry said while G. P. Hughes, playing-captain of the invading British team, added that Fred would take a long rest at the end of the present tour and wouldn't play again until the Wimbledon championships in June, and the Davis cup matches, in July.

English tennis disciples here, with an eye to Britain's retention of the Davis cup, view with no little alarm Perry's defeats by Crawford and Quist. Perry, however, laughed at such fears.

"It's just one of those slips that pass in the night," he said. "Apparently I am the only person in the world who's not worrying about it. Quist played well and I simply couldn't connect. I might as well have been walking around the streets."

Hughes likewise refused to take Perry's defeats seriously.

"There is no doubt that Quist is a greatly improved player, but great importance cannot be attached to his defeat two days ago," said Hughes. "It only goes to show that champions cannot live in heaven all the time."

VINES COMPARED.
Tennis followers see a parallel in Perry's recent defeats and mental attack to the fall and I simply couldn't connect. I might as well have been walking around the streets."

CHICAGO BEARS CLOSE SEASON IN TRIUMPH, 28-14

Route of Philly Eagles Witnessed by 15,000 Spectators.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 15.—(UP)—The Chicago Bears brought the 1934 National Professional Football league season to a close today by trimming the Philadelphia Eagles, 28 to 14, before 15,000 fans.

The Bears scored early and held a 28-10 lead at the end of the third period. In the fourth, however, the Eagles passed their way to two touchdowns.

Corbett paved the way for Chicago's first touchdown in the opening quarter when he intercepted a pass on Philadelphia's 14-yard line. Nagurski plunged over. A 62-yard run by Corbett to the 23-yard line, coupled with four line plays gave the Bears their second score.

THE BREAK OF DAY

The kids deserve all these things. They are sensible things, not luxury.

GO ON WITH THE STORY.

You can put words together that say all that. But that isn't all the story.

What else? A story about the Rose Bowl, perhaps. A story of 2,000,000 blossoms and beautiful girls passing while bands play and 2,000,000 people look on—a person for every blossom in the fields?

A story about the glory—trips on Pullmans and stopping at fine hotels?

What are those eager-eyed kids wanting to hear as they sit out there—their eyes looking at you? Well, you fumble around. You tell them that the important thing is to get something into the skull. Don't let all the excitement cheat you. Don't forget that an education is something that's there, if it isn't sponged out with all the cheers. Try to develop a sense of values. Weigh all the cheers. Try to recall just how silent the stadium sounds when all the cheers are done. And boy, they are done! They are gone forever.

You say all that. And then maybe you try to be a bit lighter. And so you tell them to take all their clip-pings about being the hero of the game and about their great work on defense and shove it over the counter at the butcher and say, "Give me a six-pound roast for this." And see what happens. Try and get it.

Remind them that when they get out there scuffling for that pay check that the cheers and the headlines will become a sort of mockery unless one can back them up with something inside the skull.

So you say for them not to let football cheat them—to get an education.

All the better coaches tell their kids that—Frank Thomas does at Alabama. He demands that his kids study those books. All the good coaches do. Tell them that. Tell them if the coach tries to cheat them, to refuse to let him.

THEY ARE STILL LOOKING.
All right, they are still looking at you. And you look down at your watch and there is still 10 minutes to go. You don't want to repeat.

So you tell them that football is a grand game—which it is. Tell them that it is a test. There is something to do on every play—a test. The play goes, or it doesn't. You excel the other player, or you don't. You win, or you lose.

A muscle gets stronger with use. Fingers of a magician become more dexterous with use. Water, constantly dripping, wears away stone.

And the continual meeting of a test strengthens the body and the mind and the character.

You go into all that. And something inside you tells you it is very true. And you tell yourself you don't give a blankie-blank if it is, it is still true.

And you can tell them that all the stuffy old pedagogues who say football is a harmful influence in collegiate life are talking their usual stuffy talk. It is harmful only where there is a weak and courage-lacking faculty.

You can tell them to stick to sports competition because it means something and gives more than it takes.

CLOSING OUT.
You look at the watch and it's about time to stop. So you ask them to look up the word "hero" in the dictionary and see if any of the fellows who are reported to be heroes of games are real heroes.

And you ask them if there is anything great about making a fine run or a great tackle except the satisfaction of doing a thing well and the satisfaction of meeting a test and mastering it.

You ring in a joke. You tell about the sub who moved down on the bench. And you tell the scrubs the truth. You tell them they get something out of it, too. More, perhaps, than the varsity.

And then you thank them for asking you to come, sit down and gulp a swallow of water.

The applause sounds and you wonder if you've said the right thing and wonder maybe if you were not wrong and should have told more jokes or tried to be peppy and light like the "Y. M. C. A." song leaders and speakers were during the war days.

Your throat is dry and you wonder if any of the kids believed you or figured you for just a big cluck up there trying to give advice. And you shrug your shoulders and get in the car and drive home.

KENNEL BARKS AND YELPS

by RALPH MCGILL

"I thank you for putting all the birds in the field, the game birds that are so much fun to hunt. And I thank you for a good hunt today. And I ask you to keep my nose keen so I can always smell them, even on the hot, dry days. And I hope you can send me a better shooter than the one I had today. He was terrible. Amen."

INVESTIGATE FIRST.
Purchasers of puppies would do well to investigate thoroughly any "cheap" pure-bred dog offered for sale. Many Atlanta-area breeders have reported cheap purchases as being unhealthy, poorly-bred, worm-infested and not in first-class condition.

Prospective buyers would do well to investigate the kennel from which the dog is to come and to inspect thoroughly the sanitation, the food, the opportunity for sunlight and to demand, without fee, an immediate look at the pedigree and an immediate possession of papers. Do not take a pure-bred puppy until the papers are in your possession or unless you have reliable information that can be obtained. Do not take a puppy on promise.

The American Kennel Club, after a thorough investigation, has made the following report:

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—"Persistent slumping of prices asked for pure-bred puppies has occasioned an informal nationwide survey by the American Kennel Club of what it really costs to bring a pedigree puppy of fairly good stock to the selling age. The conclusion, after averaging hundreds of cost sheets, is that the consumer cannot hope to purchase a good puppy that is eligible for registration at $25 or upwards, may never cause any more expense."

"This figure may seem amazing to the uninitiated, but it is an amount that has been calculated on a strictly business basis. As an average, of course, it varies in different parts of the country, due to changing costs of materials, foods, fuel, taxes, licenses, medical attention, breeding stock, stud fees, wages, and a hundred and one other items. But, if the equitable price of a puppy varies a few dollars downward, it is liable to sock-poke upward in some cases."

"One breeder has figured that to place a well-bred puppy on the market stands him $125. This amount is rather high, but then the breeder has spent a great deal of money building a plant that assures him extremely healthy dogs, and the puppies he sells are worth every cent that he asks for them."

"Many who purchase puppies do not realize that when they pay a low initial price, the subsequent upkeep is likely to mount in terrific proportion. In the end, the poorly nourished, and possibly worm-infested puppy they acquire will need constant medical attention. If he has not a good home, he will be a pest to every disease imaginable. The dog that is bought for $10, $15, or $20, may cost more than $100 before he is grown—whereas the puppy purchased at $25 or upwards, may never cause any more expense."

The last paragraph of the A. A. C. report is all too well known to many who have bought cheap dogs and paid a high upkeep price.

HARVEY HEADS NEGRO S. I. A. A.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Dec. 15.—The Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association (colored) held a harmonious conference at the Florida A. & M. College here Friday and Saturday. Business of south-wide importance was discussed and agreed upon by members of the body.

B. T. Harvey, former Morehouse College football coach, was elected president of the conference along with three other vice presidents, W. A. Hamilton, business manager of Morris Brown College and acting director of athletics, will head the central division of the conference.

The much-discussed game between Morris Brown College, of Atlanta, and Florida A. & M. College was voted a "no decision" contest by the conference. The officials of the game were not present but will be censured at the meeting of officials and coaches to be held in Atlanta in September.

The championship will be awarded within the next 10 days to the team that has the highest rating of points based on the Dickinson rating system which is officially used by the conference.

Perzia, center, and Puckett, captain and tackle on the Clark University football team, were suspended for one year because of unorthodox conduct on the field. This action caused little discussion on the floor and A. B. Wright, director of athletics at Clark University, recommended that something be done by the conference to prevent such actions in the future by college players in the conference. The suspension ends all controversy growing out of the Morris Brown and Clark University game where the players suspended struck the referee.

EASTERN LIST DROPS SHIELDS TO NUMBER TWO

Sidney B. Wood Gets First Place in Net Rankings.

By Bob Cavagnaro.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—(AP)—Frank Shields' tennis stock, weakened by an unimpressive season this year, took its first fall today as the Eastern Tennis Association, announcing its rankings for 1934, demoted the tall New Yorker to No. 2.

Shields' demotion in the eastern rankings, which placed Sidney B. Wood Jr. of New York, at the head of a list of 25 ranked players, is expected to be followed by a similar reduction in his standing in the national "first 10," which he topped last year. Nationally, it is generally figured that Shields will drop to third place.

The election of Wood to No. 1 vied for importance with the lifting of Berkeley Bell, the erstwhile Texas firebrand, from No. 6 to No. 3 and the dropping of Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., from No. 2 to No. 5. Bell staged a spectacular comeback on turf last summer and was going at breakneck speed until he folded up before Clifford Sutter in the national championship. Despite the defeat he was ranked a notch above Sutter.

MANGIN "OFF."
Mangin, admittedly a more superior player on boards than he is on turf, even lost his grip on his indoor game, dropping the national championship to Lester R. Stofen, and generally had an "off" season, partly occasioned by an eye ailment.

The eastern "first 10," announced by a committee of which W. M. Fischer is chairman, follows: No. 1, Sidney B. Wood Jr., New York; No. 2, Frank X. Shields, New York; No. 3, Berkeley Bell, New York; No. 4, Clifford Sutter, New York; No. 5, Gregory S. Mangin, New York; No. 6, J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J.; No. 7, Dr. Eugene McCulliff, Yonkers, N. Y.; No. 8, Edward W. Feibleman, New York; No. 9, Leonard Hartman, New York; No. 10, Frank J. Borden, New York.

Sutter, a native of New Orleans, is a new addition to the eastern list. In 1932 as a representative of Tulane University, he won the intercollegiate championship and the following year he teamed with Dr. McCulliff to capture the national indoor doubles crown. In 1933 he was ranked fourth nationally and this year he made New York city his business residence.

Dorothy Andrus, the Stanford, Conn., millionaire, deposed Baroness Maudie Levi, of New York, as the foremost women's singles player. The first five ranked players in this division No. 1, Miss Andrus; No. 2, Baroness Levi; No. 3, Mrs. Penelope Anderson McBride, Short Hills, N. J.; No. 4, Norma Tausche, New York; No. 5, Grace Surber, New York.

Tire Prices On Way Up, Says O'Neil

"After seven years of declining prices, the tire business has at last started upward," said W. O'Neil, president of the General Tire & Rubber Company, when asked to analyze the reasons behind the recent price increase of 18 per cent in the tire industry. "The recent rise will not be the last rise to be made."

"Every tire sold in the past three months will cost considerably more to replace. This is the first time this has been true in six years."

"I feel confident that tire prices are permanently on the upward trend because raw material prices have risen so rapidly in the past few months—rubber up 400 per cent and cotton fabric up 100 per cent—that no amount of sales volume can compensate manufacturers for these increased material costs."

"For more than six years, material prices steadily declined and, with them, the tire prices. Since 1925, when crude rubber was selling at $1.20 a pound and tire fabric was 70 cents a pound, material prices have advanced until they reached the lowest point in the history of the tire industry."

"On a declining market, both manufacturers and dealers tried frantically to get rid of the tires they had in stock. The manufacturers were trying desperately to work off their inventories made with high-priced rubber, believing that they would get a price change would reduce the value of the tires they had on hand."

"Under these conditions, tire prices were flourished and, in the mad rush to get rid of tires before prices dropped farther, prices were slashed until there was no profit for either dealer or manufacturer."

"Now, conditions are reversed. Tires that are being sold today cannot be replaced at their present cost. Dealers are no longer trying frantically to reduce their inventories at any cost. They know that they probably will get more later for tires now in their stock, so there is no reason why they should make unusual concessions to get rid of them."

"Today, the independent tire dealer has the ball. The value of his merchandise is going up. He owns his stock and he knows how to sell. 'Price conditions similar to the one which have existed in the tire industry since 1926 also prevailed in our industry, in a smaller degree, after 1920.'"

"There was a similar drop in raw material costs in 1920, but that drop was much more sudden, and then, in 1922, prices started upward again. From 1922 to 1926, conditions in the tire industry were stabilized and I believe the same condition is going to repeat itself now."

"With prices rising, wise car-owners are going to buy the very best tires they can get because it probably will be impossible to replace tires bought today with similar tires at the same price. They will save money by buying the strongest, longest-lasting tires they can get, at present-day prices."

"YAWNING WOMAN" REPORTED BETTER, FACES NEW THREAT

ROUND GROVE, Ill., Dec. 15.—(P)—The "yawning woman" is improving, but physicians are wondering now if she will become a sneezing woman.

Richberg To Speak To Automobile Dealers At National Meeting

Arrangements were begun this week in Detroit for the coming convention there of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, January 14-15, according to F. W. A. Vesper, president of N. A. D. A., at national headquarters in St. Louis. The event, he said, has been placed by Detroit civic and business groups as first on the list in importance and in its far-reaching effects of benefit to the industry.

"This will be the first N. A. D. A. national convention to be held in the capital of the automobile industry," he said, "and Detroit recognizes the fact that the welfare of the trade means the welfare of the city, because as the trade progresses, employment in the factories increases. The city is 70 per cent automotive. Just as Detroit appreciates the importance of promoting the industry, which the coming convention of dealers will do, so do the leaders throughout the business structure of the country realize that the automotive trade has led the way the last year toward better conditions."

"Plans for the convention are being based upon an estimate that 5,000 dealers will attend. This estimate was made by Aaron DeRoy, president of the Michigan Automobile Trade Association; George Slocum, publisher of the Automotive Daily News, and others. Our own reports indicate the meeting will be not only the largest in N. A. D. A. history, but the most important from the standpoint of adopting policies of permanent benefit to the entire automobile industry. One inquiry from Pennsylvania was for an entire floor to be reserved at the Statler hotel, which will be headquarters. Dealers who will attend should make their own hotel reservations direct."

The outstanding guest speaker, President Vesper said, will be Donald R. Richberg, executive director of the president's national emergency council, and who will represent President Roosevelt at the annual banquet Tuesday night, January 15. There also will be an open rate of one and one-third for the Detroit automobile show, which opens January 12, but that return date is limited, while the members of N. A. D. A. and their dependents can obtain through identification certificates, tickets good for 30 days returning. Complimentary tickets to the automobile show will be furnished dealers. Streets and stores in Detroit will be decorated for the event, President Vesper said he had been informed.

Mr. Anthony came to Atlanta just a little over three years ago, immediately won his way into the hearts of the people here. He is very prominently connected with many civic organizations, and has worked unflinchingly in behalf of any movements where the community as a whole benefited.

In talking about the fine record that his agency has made, Mr. Anthony stated that "The well-known long life of Buick coupled with faithful, dependable service accounted for the larger part of Buick's increasing popularity, and the latest reports of the R. L. Polk Company, show Buick over the entire country has increased its sales from 20 per cent of its total field in 1931 to 31.9 per cent during the first eight months of 1934. Buick is third in the total number of cars in daily operation, being beaten only by the lowest-priced cars."

"Buick's famous durability is proven by the fact that over 45 per cent of all Buicks produced are still in operation some after 10, 20, and 25 years of unflinching service."

"In Atlanta," said Mr. Anthony, "registrations of Buick cars have been the highest of any year, since 1931. More Buicks were delivered through the first eight months of 1934 than during the entire year of 1933."

"In 1933, more than ever before, proved Buick's famous slogan, 'When Better Cars are Built, Buick Will Build Them.'"

"The 1935 models incorporate the greatest refinements that Buick has ever attempted. Our clientele, more than ever before will find in these cars a degree of satisfaction never before thought possible in an automobile," Mr. Anthony concluded.

'Safety' Keynote Of Tires and Tubes Built by U.S. Rubber

Just as safety is one of the most important factors in the construction of U. S. Royal Tires, so it is one of the most important factors in the construction of U. S. Royal Tubes. Nine points of safety are emphasized by the manufacturer.

Trapped air vents, which eliminate the hazard of trapped air; full tire fitting size, which fills casing with minimum stretch; heat resisting stock, which assures long life vitality; full circular molded, which prevents buckling and creasing; chaffing resistant, which guarantees long wear; dynamic balance, which reduces shimmy and tramp; greater tensile strength, which lessens blowout danger; pedicured rubber, a better rubber from pedicured trees; water tested under pressure, with every tube triple inspected.

Fine Sales Record

Being Made Here

By Anthony Buick

Perhaps one of the most convincing advancements in the automobile business here, is the fine record made this year by the organization of Anthony Buick, Inc., which has been at the end of the past September their agency had passed the total volume in sales over the entire year of 1933. This is a record any dealer should be justly proud of. It was made in spite of happenings in other southern industries that directly effected automobile sales over the entire region.

Walter Y. Anthony, president of the company, personally directs volume activities and the vast volume of business they do is an indication of the acceptance of his rigid policies that favor the owner in every

A splendid entertainment program has been prepared this year under the direction of Al Belle Isle. Immediately following the election of officers a splendid course dinner will be served following which the entertainment program will get under way.

This association has enjoyed a successful and is looking forward to a year of constructive work during 1935.

De Soto Dealers Shown New Cars At Meeting Here

The new 1935 De Soto cars, said to be a complete surprise to the automobile industry, were unveiled here last Friday at a meeting of De Soto dealers and executives at the Biltmore hotel.

Dealers from every section of the Atlanta district obtained their first glimpse of the new models. They were enthusiastic about the prospects for the coming year after seeing the cars.

J. J. Palmer, of the De Soto Motor Corporation, described details of the cars and outlined the company's merchandising and advertising programs for 1935. He said that De Soto engineers, who set the style pace in 1934, have scored again in the design of the new De Soto.

The definite date for the presentation of the cars to the public has not been set as yet, but it is understood that the dealers will be able to start showing the cars within a few weeks.

Mr. Palmer said: "De Soto has another big surprise for the public in 1935. The new De Sotos will attract just as much attention and excite just as much comment as the present cars."

"There has been a great deal of speculation throughout the industry recently on what De Soto would do in 1935. Conflicting reports said that De Soto planned more advanced streamlining; that De Soto intended to present new models not as streamlined as the present cars."

"As in previous years, the eyes of the motor world are trained on De Soto, waiting for an answer to the question: What will the streamlined cars of 1935 look like?"

United Motors Service Shop Gets New Tester

"Who Has Punched Holes in the Gasoline Tank?" is the title of a very interesting booklet written and distributed throughout Atlanta by Ray Wilson, service manager for the United Motors Service, Inc.

This book was written especially for the large fleet users of cars. It suggests to them the many ways that invisible holes can be punched in the gasoline tank of their truck equipment. It goes into detail covering thoroughly the workings of motors and how a few minor adjustments can sometimes save many hundreds of dollars in expensive repairs. Every manager in Atlanta should have one.

Under Mr. Wilson's direction the local repair shop of the United Motors Service, Inc., has made some wonderful records. Their plant is equipped with testers recommended by the various factories, which have eliminated the guess work from finding motor troubles.

One of the newest pieces of equipment is a machine that tells them at a glance whether or not the spark is arcing at the proper moment to give the maximum in economy and performance. This machine is especially useful where high compression heads are on the motors, and is a very important check for efficiency in motor operation.

The policies of the company enable them to put expert men on each individual job. This is insurance to the owner that the particular trouble will be handled by a man that understands thoroughly the working of the particular part he adjusts or overhauls. The shop is in the last few months are in fact interested they can stay and see just what is done to put the car back in shape.

The testing machines are just a part of the services they offer motorists. They are equipped to handle any kind of work they are called upon to do, and the records they have hung on the last few months are indicative of the acceptance of their method and policies by local motorists.

In addition to the automobile checking and repairing, they maintain a unit of the south's finest radio laboratories. This department is also equipped to render prompt and efficient service. Their electricians are called upon daily to solve radio troubles for owners and dealers alike. They are retail agents for many of the standard make automobile radios, as well as the instruments to play a melody and household sets that are available in both the 110 and 32-volt fields.

Recent rumors that have been circulated relative to some large motor car manufacturer, presumably a unit of General Motors, introducing another line of low-priced sixes in the near future has simmered down to the Pontiac Motor Company.

So many inquiries have poured in to the offices of the company asking for a confirmation, that H. J. Klingler, president and general manager, finally has admitted their truth.

"The cat seems to be pretty well out of the bag," said Mr. Klingler, "and there doesn't seem to be any good reason for further denials. However, I don't know why it is, but it has been almost impossible to keep our plans a secret in regard to this new line of sixes. It simply goes to show the widespread interest that is taken in the low-price field and particularly the quality, six-cylinder field."

"Most of the good things that have been heard about this new six are true. The time is so short until we make our public announcement, and the job of answering all of these inquiries so great, that it seems to be the same and economic thing to confirm the rumors."

Superintendent's Message

My Dear Boys and Girls:

How rapidly the weeks have passed away, and here we stand on the threshold of Christmas! Christmas is one of the oldest institutions in the world. Throughout all ages Christmas has been a children's festival; a season of home life, and I sincerely trust that each of us will endeavor to make it a home festival when we shall all do our best to contribute to the happiness and welfare of others; remembering Him who came into the world "not to be ministered unto, but to minister" and to "give His life a ransom for many." Let us sing joyful songs, let us be happy!

On the other day someone called and asked me what I wished for Christmas. I said: "I wish that every child in the city of Atlanta may have his Christmas gift and be happy." I want every child in the public schools, from the oldest high school pupil down to the youngest kindergarten, at 9 o'clock on Christmas morning to go out upon your porch or open your door and send out into the air a Merry, Merry Christmas and a happy laugh so that we shall all say "MERRY CHRISTMAS" at the same time. If we have sorrow or sickness in our homes, may we breathe a prayer, and then let us go forth with happiness in our hearts to bring good cheer to all with whom we come in contact.

Always your friend,
Superintendent of Schools.

COUCH CHILDREN VISITED BY DENTIST

The dentist visited our school last week. He was working hard to get all the children's teeth fixed.

We are glad to welcome our new assistant kindergarten teacher who before moving to New York taught at our old Stanton school.

We are now having an art exhibit and Miss Rainwater has offered prizes to the children who can name a certain number of pictures and their artist.

PUPILS AT KINGSBERRY PUBLISH NEWSPAPERS

At the fifth and sixth grades assembly, the boys and girls were given a rare treat. Harold Locklear, who is only seven years old and has been to school only one year, read Dr. Sutton's letter although he had no chance at all to study this difficult subject.

Miss Kingsberry had Harold read to show what a child could accomplish in one year's time if he likes to read.

Low 1-1 have a feathered friend who gives them much pleasure. His name is Spot. This canary stays at school and pours out his songs all day long, much to the joy of the children.

Monday morning Low 6-1, Low 6-2 and High 4-2 completed class newspapers. The papers carried articles about the activities of each grade and were illustrated by attractive original art work.

Each year all "de criers" come to life for a spell, and help to celebrate the birthday of Joel Chandler Harris, one of the best friends of the children. Announcement was made Saturday by John Lusk, president of the Central Mortgage & Realty Co., which owns valuable property at the southwest corner of West Peachtree and 14th streets, that two important leases, one to the A. A. Highway Motor Express Company for the large building at 29 Fourteenth street, and the other to the McConnell, Inc., pure food store.

The A. A. Highway Express Company lease was for an unannounced number of years. The A. A. Highway Express Company operates a fleet of trucks running to Athens, Augusta, Anderson and other important towns in this section of the southeast.

The McConnell store was conceived and sponsored by Mrs. Lee Davis, charter members of the Museum of Art, a member of the Studio Club of Atlanta, and of the Little Theater Guild of Atlanta. Mrs. Davis looks after the store decorations and detail arrangements.

Atlanta Newsboys To Be Guests At Annual Frolic Christmas Eve

The annual "frolic" given for the 250 newsboys of Atlanta by philanthropic merchants will be held at 7:00 o'clock Christmas eve at the Piedmont hotel.

Since 1915, with the exception of three years, Phil C. McDuffie, Atlanta attorney, has arranged the yearly feast and entertainment, with the aid of citizen leaders, grocers, candy merchants and turkey raisers.

A yellowed copy of the first special newsboys' edition, printed by the three Atlanta papers, in 1915, contains glowing accounts of the havoc wrought by 200 fasteners at the first banquet. Many names familiar to the city, appear on the list of speakers, including Judge Nash Broyles, the late Asa C. Candlish, the late Mayor James C. Woodward, Colonel Fred J. Faxon, Mr. McDuffie and others. And many a new successful businessman can recall with unmitigated pleasure his first feast as one of the army of news-hawkers.

The 1915 edition gives an account of the rise of Howard Haire from newsboy to a clerical position in the circulation department of the Journal. Mr. Haire is now councilman from the ninth ward, and is connected with The Constitution.

The big party this year will have the added features of acts from the Atlanta and Capitol theaters and, with the usual turkey and cranberry and mince pies, candies and fruits and nuts, promises to give the newsboys one of the greatest parties ever held in the city.

The CONSTITUTION'S STAMP CORNER

—By N. S. Noble—

1.—Germany. An unusual set of nine semi-postals, ranging from 3 plus 2 pfennigs to 40 pfennigs, which has been issued by Germany. This set portrays various German national workers in characteristic poses: The Executive, Blacksmith, Housewife, Architect, Farmer, Scientist, Sculptor, and Judge. The stamps are recess printed on paper watermarked with the familiar avars, and are scheduled to be withdrawn February 28, 1935.

2.—Italy. Italy, as all stamp collectors know, is very much interested in promoting aviation, as well as philately. Now a new Italian air mail (2 lire, dark blue), attractively modernistic in design, illustrates one of the newer types of giant postage planes.

3.—Poland. One of the foremost patriots in Poland is Marshal Josef Pilsudski, whom we see on a new 25 groszy, brown stamp which commemorates the twentieth anniversary of the Polish Legion. Pilsudski was commander of the Legion, which fought so valiantly in the World War. When Poland was established as a republic at the close of the war, Pilsudski became the first president, and although he no longer holds the office, he exerts a powerful influence over the affairs of the country.

4.—Chile. The progressive and prosperous republic of Chile has just issued a new stamp (2 pesos, red) with the first postal portrait of Santa Maria, who was president of the country from 1882 to 1888. We do not know the reason for choosing his portrait, but perhaps, since Chile has had six presidents in the last 18 months, someone decided that if Santa Maria was able to hold office for two years in Chile, he must have been a mighty fine man, and therefore worthy of being honored with a stamp.

STAMP COLLECTORS' CLUB MILTON PUPILS HONOR

The Stamp Collectors' Club of Atlanta will elect officers Monday night for the ensuing six-month period. All members are urged to attend this semi-annual meeting. The club meets at 7:30 o'clock each Monday night in the assembly hall on the Peachtree building, on the balcony. Visitors are always welcome at the meetings.

COLLECTORS' NOTES.

A new publication for stamp collectors, a 96-page book which sells for 25 cents, has appeared, No. 14 in a series published by the "Stamp Collecting," by Henry Renouf, a collector and author. The booklet is illustrated with full page photographs of collectors and those just entering the hobby.

and will prove of interest to junior collectors.

A third walked out of Horticultural hall in Boston with a collection of stamps on display at the hobby show, which was labelled, in large letters, "Worth Four Billion Dollars," but the book was not an all-time record.

In small letters, had the thief taken time to read more carefully, was the explanation that "the originals of this collection" were worth four billion dollars. What he got were reproductions of the most valuable stamps in the world—worth $250.

The Japanese government has issued a series of attractive stamps in commemoration of the Red Cross Congress in Tokyo. This was the first meeting of its kind ever to be held in the orient.

H. I. H. Prince Kotohito Kanin is honorary president of the Red Cross in Japan, which has 47 branches in the empire. There are 2,701,352 regular members and a junior membership of 2,059,968. It was organized in 1887.

All the stamps bear the Imperial insignia and the Red Cross. The 1-12

STAMP MART

When the parcel post service was started in 1912 it was decided to have special stamps for this type of mail. So 12 adhesives, all printed in red but having various center designs, were made ready. The denominations ranged from one cent to one dollar. They were accompanied by five postage-free values, all in green.

The uniformity of color resulted in confusion of denominations. While the size of the stamp, declared to be too large or small for the purpose, was one objection. The size of the stamp made it necessary to print them in sheets of 45 instead of 100, adding further to the difficulties.

Finally the next year, just as new stamps were about to be printed, the conclusion was reached that the parcel post had served their purpose, that is, to indicate the amount of parcel post revenue. Since then, ordinary postage stamps have been rapid for parcel post. The special holiday stamp was first brought out in 1925. It was a 25-cent denomination for use on fourth-class matter to give it the same rate as the regular first-class mail. Printed in deep green, it was the size of the special delivery. In the center was the figure "25" with "special handling" in a semi-circle directly above.

This stamp proved so advantageous that in 1928 denominations of 10, 15 and 20 cents were added to the 25-center when change was necessary to conform to new rates. This printing was of the same design as the earlier stamps but with a slight change in color to yellow green.

Xmas Gaieties Revolve Around School Girls

Lovely college belles will vie with attractive debutantes for social honors during the Christmas holidays, and the attention of adoring parents and hosts of admirers will be focused upon their arrival and the charming visitors who will accompany the schoolgirls to Atlanta. Parties galore will revolve around these fascinating creatures who have been applying themselves studiously to gain an education, and deserve the good times that are attendant upon the festive holiday season.

Miss Yundt will make her formal bow to society at a supper-dance to be given on Christmas Eve, when she shares honors with her twin sister, Miss Marion Yundt, and her cousin, Miss Julian Boykin. Accompanying Miss Yundt from the east will be Miss Mary Large, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Large, who is a popular member of the Vassar student body.

Miss Louise Richardson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson, will complete the trio of Atlanta belles coming from Vassar for the Christmas season; to visit her parents on Pace's Ferry road, and will be a charming addition to social affairs during the holiday season.

Attractive Visitors To Spend Holidays With Miss Carr

Debutantes and their swains are anticipating with a great deal of pleasure the arrival on December 26 of Miss Kate McCreary, of Philadelphia, Pa., and Miss Sally Sackett, of Lynchburg, Va., who will visit Miss Mary Ann Carr, one of the most popular members of the debutante coterie. These attractive belles will be accompanied by the latter's brother, Henry Sackett, who is studying law at the University of Virginia, the trio to be numbered among the prominent guests attending the debut ball of Miss Carr and Miss Frances Weinman to be given at the Piedmont Driving Club the day after Christmas.

Miss McCreary was Miss Carr's classmate at the Spence school in New York city and Miss Carr attended the National Cathedral school in Washington, D. C., with Miss Sackett. Miss McCreary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. McCreary, made hosts of friends in Atlanta when she visited Miss Carr two years ago. She goes to Newport every summer, where her parents own a villa, and Miss McCreary takes a prominent part in the social life of that famous resort. Miss Sackett is a senior at Randolph-Macon College, from which she receives her diploma in June. The brunette beauty of winsome Miss Carr corresponds to the exotic loveliness of Miss McCreary and Miss Sackett.

The Sage Twins Featured in Pictures.

The Sage twins, Margot and Mary, brunette and blonde nieces of Oliver Hardy, the famous comedian, are fast becoming known in Hollywood, the moving picture land. They are being featured in the comedy, "The Live Ghost," starring their uncle, which is being filmed for presentation at an early date.

Letters from California written to their Atlanta relatives and friends relate interesting experiences, and tell of the busy life of these erstwhile-Atlanta debutantes. The work is hard but fascinating and takes up a great deal of their time. The Sage twins are much admired and are having a festive and busy social life.

THE sextet of beautiful college belles pictured above return this week from the various institutions of learning to add their presence to social affairs and to spend the holidays in Atlanta. Miss Thiesen is attending Gunston Hall in Washington, D. C. Miss Roddey goes to the University of Georgia at Athens. Miss L'Engle is enrolled at Gunston Hall in Washington, D. C. ## Miss Gresham Makes Bow At Luncheon at Driving Club

Miss Juanita Stovall Gresham, lovely debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Irving Gresham, made her formal bow to society at a luncheon given on Saturday by her mother, Mrs. Gresham, at the Piedmont Driving Club. Invited to meet the charming young honor guest were members of the Debutantes' Club and a few additional guests. Mrs. Gresham, with the debutante and her guest, Miss Katherine Eaves, of New Orleans, and Mrs. Collett Munger, of Dallas, Texas, received the guests in the lounge, which was adorned with crimson roses and southern smilax. The mantle was banked with roses, and ropes of smilax garlanded the ceiling and formed graceful loops against the walls. Vases of roses graced tables and pedestals and bouquets of flowers, sent the honor guests by friends, were effectively arranged.

The honor guest was gowned in fuchsia velvet, fashioned with a high rolled collar, ornamented with a silver cord, and a monk's cord of silver belted the becoming gown. Her smart hat was of black mullin and she carried a velvet muff to match her gown, which was ornamented with a sunburst fashioned of valley lilies centered with deep-toned purple orchids, showered with small white orchids. Her exquisite shoulder spray was formed of orchids.

Mrs. Munger wore gray duvetyne with a collar studded with hobnails. Her hat repeated the dove gray of her gown and she wore a spray of green orchids. Miss Eloise Gresham, sister of the debutante, assisted in receiving. She was gowned in black velvet with a shoulder spray of purple orchids. Mrs. William Jenkins, Mrs. Roy Wynne and Mrs. Jack Bothamley assisted in entertaining the guests. Poinsettias and rich green

'Midnight Frolic' Invitations Are Novel Affairs

Mysterious white envelopes of giant size have been received recently by members of the social contingent, and when opened revealed the colorful and unique invitations to the annual "Midnight Frolic" planned by Mr. and Mrs. Phillips C. McDuffie for Thursday evening, December 27, at their Cherokee road residence. Against a blue star-filled sky a blond maiden is pictured with crimson leis encircling her throat and holding a ukelele in one hand.

"Life's but a gamble as you will see, Saints won't miss in this jambores. But please keep and then suggest. Buffoon or sinner may be our guest."

Twin mountain peaks, Mouna Loa and Mouna Kea, are etched against the sky line and swaying palms line the shore. Miniature figures reveal the tempo of the party for a nonchalant gentleman in evening attire sways across the top of the invitation, and graceful figures glide across the dance floor. An orchestra renders plaintive strains of music and a hula girl in grass skirt and leis swings to the rhythmic chords. The Spirit of Early Dawn discloses a recumbent figure sleeping comfortably in a chair, with a tall silk hat and cane reposing on the floor.

"Honolulu Night, my dear. Will make you all stand up and cheer. Your date, the 'bitch,' you'll find quite dear."

Within This Charming Atmosphere. Guests are bidden to come, to look, stay to live, and to enjoy a glorified, new, dazzling and different midnight frolic. It promises "intoxicating music, ravishing, beautiful debutantes from recent, present and early future seasons, and is an adventure one cannot afford to miss, and to arrive at 10 o'clock, enjoy an hour's dancing and linger for the midnight frolic and stay and catch the Spirit of Early Dawn."

"This is the time, with the village folded in sleep, With life and color, rich as a beautiful fall. To dance and frolic, where folks won't sleep. And think of Nothing At All."

Oscar Hyatt's "Aloha" lends its beauty to the invitation and clever little verses adorn the card, and are printed below:

"Aloha means farewell to thee, Aloha means good-by; It means until we meet again Beneath a tropical sky. Aloha means good morning And always to be true But the best thing that Aloha means Is I love You."

Priceless Real Lace Trimming Bridal Robe Has History

When 18-year-old Miss Louise Collier Stanton becomes Mrs. John Dudley Clemens at a fashionable ceremony taking place on December 22 at White Thorns, the colonial mansion of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stanton, in Wayne, Ill., she will don a silver metal cloth wedding gown threaded with gold. Trimming the exquisite creation will be a flounce of priceless real lace that has a history linked with Atlanta. Aside from its intrinsic value, there is attached a bit of sentiment as to how the lace came into the possession of the bride-elect.

Years ago, when Atlanta was in its infancy, a devoted friendship existed when Miss Stanton's maternal grandmother, the late Mrs. Charles A. Collier, and the late Mrs. Joseph Burke. When Mrs. Henry Stanton, the bride-elect's mother, was born in this city, she was christened "Louise Colting," the maiden name of Mrs. Burke. Among the many keepsakes bestowed upon her beloved namesake by Mrs. Burke was the exquisite lace to be used upon the bridal robe of the granddaughter of her best friend. Nor is this the only bit of sentiment associated with this marriage taking place in far away Illinois, because Miss Stanton will wear to the altar an amethyst pin encircled with pearls, which Mrs. Burke gave Mrs. Julian Harris, maternal aunt of the bride-to-be.

Youthful and beautiful Miss Stanton will be enveloped in a misty tulle veil for this auspicious ceremony, which takes place in the palatial drawing room at White Thorns. The maid of honor, Miss Julia Collier Keenan, of Berkeley, Cal., the bride-elect's cousin, will serve as maid of honor, and will wear a costume of gold slipper satin, and turquoise moire will fashion the bridesmaids' costumes. Leaving today for Wayne will be Mrs. Robert W. Davis, maternal aunt of the bride-elect, who will assist at the reception, as will Mrs. Allen Albert, the former Miss Emily Davis, of Atlanta, whose marriage carried her to Chicago last September to establish her future residence. Mr. Clemens is a representative of influential families in Erie, Pa., but after their marriage they will live in Joliet, Ill.

palms graced the loggia, and the two private dining rooms, where luncheon was served, featured artistic decorations. Guests were seated at a table built with a hollow oval, where a flower-circled fountain played. Cluny lace veiling white satin covered the table and white porcelain vases held pink roses and valley lilies. Roses and valley lilies were caught to the table edge in garlands. The fountain was fringed with roses and valley lilies and pink begonias in pyramid effect covered lights veiled in pink, giving a soft glow. Sweet peas in delicate pink tones combined with valley lilies were caught to the chandelier, and crystal goblets were tied with fan-shaped bouquets formed of valley lilies, sweet peas and maidenhair ferns. Place cards, gold edged, were inscribed with Miss Gresham's monogram. Yellow tones were featured in the appointments adorning the other dining room. Golden-shaded roses centered the long table and valley lilies added interest to the decorations. Southern smilax in graceful garlands was suspended from the ceiling and walls and roses were arranged on side tables and buffet.

on Wednesday, December 26. The group entertained at a lovely tea last Wednesday afternoon at the Seventeenth street home of Mrs. Fritz Jones, a popular member of the organization, as a complimentary gesture to Miss Horton. A feature of the occasion was the presentation to the bride-elect of a beautiful frosted crystal bowl, etched in silver around the rim and ornamented with a graceful flower design in bas relief. The presentation was made with a clever little speech by Miss Helen Knox Spain, who is program chairman for the Pen Women. The lace-covered tea table was Walter Robinson, pastor of the church, performing the ceremony in the presence of the families and friends.

Palms and ferns formed a beautiful background for the chancel decoration over which a glow was shed by cathedral candles in candelabra. A program of music was rendered before the service, including "The Swan," by Saint-Saens; the "Lohengrin," "Wedding March," by Miss Mary Ray Dobyns. During the ceremony, "I Love You Truly," by Bond, was rendered by Miss Claire Harper. Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was rendered for the recessional.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones Are Missed Here.

Perhaps the presence of no pair will be missed at the gay social festivities to be given during the holidays as will be Mr. and Mrs. Turner Jones, who with their children, Turner Jr., and Virginia Ashby, moved recently to Wilmington, Del., to make their home. Since their marriage fifteen years ago Mr. and Mrs. Jones have been listed among Atlanta's most popular members of young married society, and because of their sparkling personalities and gracious manner, they were ever sought by hosts and hostesses who desired to make their parties a success.

Since establishing residence in the city just above the Mason-Dixon line, Mr. and Mrs. Jones have already identified themselves with Wilmington's social, civic and cultural circles. Atlanta friends who returned from there recently report that these former Atlantans are receiving a cordial welcome from residents in the Delaware city and their presence is being sought for many social functions assembling Wilmington's young married set.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones have taken a home at 908 Greenhill avenue, which friends state is not unlike the lovely home which they occupied here on Collier road. Situated opposite the golf course, the three-story red brick home occupies a distinct place in Wilmington's fashionable residential section and commands an excellent view of the broad sweeping green links. The lower floor of the attractive home is finished in applewood, which harmonizes so perfectly with the soft pastel walls that characterize the interior of the home.

Finding a welcome equal to that accorded their charming parents, Turner Jr. and Virginia have become popular members of Wilmington's youthful contingent and are numbered among the many interesting children enrolled at Tower Hill Progressive school.

The occasion will honor Miss Barbara Selman, who arrives December 21 from Randolph-Macon College to spend the holidays with her parents.

On bright red lacquered paper the novel invitations reveal a Pullman train stopping at the Terminal station with the college girl-daughter stepping from the car followed by a red-capped porter bearing luggage galore. On the inside page of the card appears the following invitation printed in green ink captioned by the greeting "Cheerio!"

"Christmas begins at our house when Barbara steps off the train. And her pals, too, who've been away will be coming home again. Christmas joy is in the air—and my 'we're so excited' A lot of friends, both old and new, to greet them we've invited. ## Legion Auxiliary District Meetings Prove of Interest to Members

Macon Clubwomen Will Help Fill
Xmas Stockings

Adopting as its slogan, "Not One Empty Stocking in Macon on Christmas Day," the Christmas Stocking League of the Macon Woman's Club requests co-operation from individuals, churches, fraternal organizations, in filling 2,000 stockings for the underprivileged children.

Several hundred empty stockings have been taken by clubs and individuals to be filled and returned to headquarters for the league. Members will be at the headquarters each day to distribute the bags to be filled and returned to the league.

"This Christmas stocking campaign," Mrs. L. I. Wazebaum, president of the Woman's Club, stated, "is an attempt to bring to the attention of projects being undertaken by the social agencies of Macon. It will be supplementary."

For more information, when filled, will be distributed among all the established social agencies according to their needs.

and will only add to their gifts to the needy. The gifts of the women will be empty-handed on Christmas morning.

"The only way of sharing with those who are in want is through what one of our members of Christmas fruits and nuts and candies," she said.

"Of course, if the individual can afford to give more than the minimum, he can add a toy of some kind. However, we shall add anything that is lacking to equalize the pleasure to the children who are not so fortunate."

The local organizations are caring for children under their personal charge, but the Yuletide project is the work of the Woman's Club league, to give joy to the multitude of toys outside the direct aid of any civic club or group.

The plan was discussed and carried in a small way by Betty Jones, 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Jones, who is being taken care of by a committee composed largely of welfare chairman from the women's club.

Mrs. Wrenshaw suggested that individuals desiring to aid in the Yuletide project might interest their neighbors by forming a group of a number of stockings. Member of Mrs. Jones' committee are Mesdames W. J. Stripling, E. J. Stripling, E. J. Walker, Lovick Lindro, Jerome Lindro, and Mrs. J. J. Lindro.

Industrial School Head Addresses Fulton P.T. A.

"Godless homes were the background of the children at Fulton County Industrial School," stated Colonel J. I. Nash, superintendent of the school, in an address at the December meeting of Fulton County Parent-Teacher Association, at which he was guest speaker. In a stirring address in which he pleaded for parents to revert to the teaching of their fathers, when all children were taught: first to respect the laws of God, and as a sequence the laws of their country, Colonel Nash said: "Moral training is needed in the schools along with other education if we want to atone the terrible wave of crime, now sweeping our country, and the parent-teacher associations are the best group of people to see that this is done." We must meet this great crime wave, which President Roosevelt spoke in his broadcast of the past week, with a moral wave starting in our own homes and women and men in parent-teacher work are the strongest force in the nation today to combat it. Through their parents can be urged to see that their children attend Sunday school, get spiritual training, and learn to respect the Golden Rule.

Miss Margaret Wallace, chairman of character education of the council, introduced the speaker, and Mrs. Elmo Sluder, chairman of character education for the fifth district, who was recently interested in Colonel Nash's talk, urged that the council make a beginning in this splendid work by force of example.

Rev. Robert Lambkin, of Chatham-Parish, rendered the invocation. A welcome was given Miss Kathleen Mitchell, her first membership chairman, on her first visit to the council after an absence of 39 weeks due to an accident.

She told the council of the splendid work the Red Cross is doing in giving to the children of the world, and urged that local P.T. A.'s take advantage of it and form classes.

Mrs. Frank Bettis, council president, asked all present to attend the music-literature recital to be given December 17 at Wesley Memorial auditorium by the fifth district. The program featured Mrs. Colby, pianist, and Ralph Ramsey, principal of Fulton High school, as speaker.

P.T. A. of Carey Park won the cash attendance prize and Lakewood P.T. A. the banner.

Cox; Harold Shields, Cascade; H. H. T. Childs, College Street; Haperville; A. F. Miller, George F. Longino, College Park; E. B. Reeves, Rico, Palmetto; W. B. Joiner, Alonzo Richmond, College Park; W. Miss Gertrude Pollard, principal of Morningside, extends an invitation to the public, and especially invites every one to visit the library.

TIME FOR ACTION

The emergent need for an immediate and determined campaign to control the ravages of the screw worm in Georgia is emphasized in the startling revelation that since July of last year more than a half million animals have been infested; 30 human beings have been attacked with one fatality as a result, and that in less than 18 months the pest has spread over two-thirds of the area of the state.

In Texas, from which the pest was imported to Georgia, the infestation amounts to only 2 per cent of the livestock in the state, while in Georgia, after only 18 months, the infestation amounts to between 12 and 15 per cent, with 20 per cent of mortality.

The rapid spread of the screw worm in Georgia, causing as it has the deaths of thousands of cattle, hogs, sheep and wild game, not only threatens the existence of the livestock industry in the state, but contains an alarming threat to all agricultural interests and to the lives and health of the people.

There must be an immediate concentration of effort by state and federal authorities in order that the spread of the pest be stopped and that it be brought under control in the areas already affected.

In view of the imminent threat to other states, the federal government should swing into action at once. In its possible destruction of property and threat to the welfare of the rural sections of the country, the screw worm carries a greater danger than did the boll weevil when it crossed the Mexican border and advanced until it had covered the entire cotton belt.

Without exception the members of the Georgia delegation, many of them already aware of the critical situation faced, have pledged their efforts to bring federal authorities to a full realization of the seriousness of the threat, and to secure ample appropriations to cover the cost of an intensive warfare against the screw worm.

Elsewhere in this issue, M. S. Yeomans, state entomologist, gives a startling picture of the ravages of the screw worm as it has made its advance through the state. Mr. Yeomans outlines the only methods so far devised to meet the attack of the pest, and urges the stock breeders of the state to carefully watch their herds until some method of eradication can be evolved.

Various state agencies are doing their utmost to cope with the new threat to the rural prosperity of Georgia, but the present situation is one calling for the conduct of a campaign by the federal government similar in scope to the one which accomplished the eradication of the Mediterranean fly in Florida some years ago.

The problem is not a state one, as the pest, unless conquered in Georgia, will spread into every cattle-raising section of the country.

The Georgia delegation in congress should receive the full and earnest support of the senator and congressmen from other southern states in the insistence that the federal government appropriate sufficient funds and assign as many men as are needed to put an end to the threat that, if not warded off, will deliver a death blow to livestock production in this section.

BANKHEAD ACT WINS

The overwhelming vote cast by the cotton producers of the south for the continuance of the Bankhead control act for another year assures the sale of the 1935 crop at prices that will assure prosperity in the agricultural south.

While the action on the Bankhead bill was presaged by the favorable vote of farmers in other sections who have already endorsed production control of wheat, corn and hogs, the tremendous majority cast by the southern farmers for the cotton control act is surprising, in view of the bitter criticism that has been voiced by the small croppers. The result of the vote is undoubtedly attributable to the influence of the profits made this year by the cotton producers and the faith that the inequalities that grew out of the administration of the act will be eliminated in 1935.

Already President Roosevelt has expressed himself as being in favor of the exemption of the two-bale or-less farmer from the workings of the act, and Secretary Wallace has promised a careful check on the local boards, against the decisions to which much of the criticism has been directed.

A hopeful feature of the to-to approval of the Bankhead act is the indication that the farmers of the south, who have in the past generally opposed efforts to organize them into effective associations, have awakened to the vital importance of co-operative effort.

The government acreage reduction contracts and the Bankhead act have only one more year to run, and should all control be dropped at the end of that period it is probable that the largest crops in the history of the south would follow.

The support of the Bankhead bill given by the producers in Friday's voting is comforting assurance that the farmers, having benefited by their first experience with rigid control, are of a mind now either to favor a continuance of federal control or else to organize themselves to that end.

Every interest in the south will be benefited by the wise action of the cotton producers. The assurance it brings of good prices for the staple next year will bring a stabilization that will enable southern business and industry to expand with confidence that healthful and prosperous conditions lie ahead in the south.

THE BIG BROTHERS

Today hundreds of leading Atlanta citizens, enrolled in the ranks of the Big Brothers, will call at the homes of the city and offer for sale the Big Brother edition of "The Constitution," the proceeds from which will go toward the purchase of gifts for needy families.

The Constitution and Atlanta Post, No. 1 of the American Legion are jointly sponsoring the raising of a fund that will bring joy to hundreds of Atlanta homes that otherwise would know only hardship and deprivation this Christmas.

Bright and early this morning the small army of Big Brothers, carrying bundles of The Constitution's special edition, will begin the round of the fortunate homes in which the approach of the holiday season means happiness and brightness.

At each door the Big Brothers will ask that a paper be purchased, even though a copy of the regular edition had already been delivered.

The degree to which the purchasers of the special edition open their hearts and pocketbooks will determine the number of homes to which the Big Brother baskets will bring cheer on Christmas Day. A coin will help; a banknote will mean that the Big Brothers will be able to include another family among those to receive gifts.

There are hundreds of little family groups in Atlanta this Christmas in which there will be no toys for the youngsters, no gifts for their older brothers and sisters, and in which the parents will have only downcast spirits unless more fortunate fellow citizens come to their aid. There will be no candies or cakes for the little ones and not enough, if any, nourishing food for the older members.

It is to bring the Christmas spirit, to drive away the realization of Fate's hard knocks for at least the holiday season, that the Big Brothers will sell the special edition of The Constitution to raise a fund sufficient to provide a basket for every family in Atlanta that otherwise would have nothing but depression and disappointment on Christmas Day.

When the Big Brothers visit the homes of Atlanta where the elders, surrounded by the bright faces of the little ones, planning the joys of the approaching holiday season, sit in comfort and warmth, they should find a liberal response to their appeal in behalf of a charity designed to insure that every home in Atlanta, however humble, shall be imbued this year with the Christmas spirit.

PUTTING THE DOCTOR LAST

An interesting and revealing compendium of comments by leading Atlanta physicians, bearing on the recent editorial in The Constitution under the heading, "Unfair to the Doctor," is presented on the opposite page. The names of the writers are not presented because of the ethical restrictions of the profession.

In these communications the unjust and unfair plight in which the medical fraternity is placed by the inexcusable custom of people of all ranks and financial standing of placing the doctors' accounts at the bottom of the list of bills to be paid, is forcefully presented.

It is shown that in 1929 the average doctor was making $7,000 a year, out of which he had to pay his overhead for office rent, nurses, automobile upkeep and the other items necessary to the practice of his profession. By 1932 this average had fallen to $4,800 a year, $300 below the income of the average untrained wage earner, and barely sufficient to cover the doctor's necessary expenses.

The doctors of the country, it is pointed out, have to bear the burden of a third of a billion dollars annually for services rendered to those who can pay but who either refuse or neglect to do so. This is in addition to the huge amount of charity work done by the members of the profession.

In the final analysis, the public also suffers from the unfair treatment of the doctors, for, as is cited in one of the communications, "physicians cannot be expected to render that efficient and competent service which they should render if they are confronted by financial chaos and unable to meet their own obligations."

The medical profession is second to no other profession in the requirement upon its members for thorough training, hard work and long hours and nerve-taxing responsibility.

The members of the profession are the first to be called in an emergency, and yet, as strange and unfair as it is, are the last to be paid for the services that are, literally, of life and death importance.

Every family head should read the communications presented by The Constitution today. They convincingly show the unfair treatment accorded to the members of the medical profession, not by those who are unable to pay their doctor's bills, but by those who can and do not.

A FAULTY SYSTEM

The handicap faced by Georgia farmers in the lack of an efficient marketing system under which they can find certain and profitable markets for their products is emphasized in a communication, appearing on the opposite page, from J. M. Wilson, prominent Atlanta business executive.

Mr. Wilson describes the organization by the businessmen of a small city in Mississippi of a corporation to care for the transportation of vegetables grown in the surrounding area, to the nearest available markets—an experiment which he writes "is working out on a very satisfactory basis."

Among the farm products trucked three times a week from this southern Mississippi area are three shipments a week of unsweetened condensed milk to Atlanta, which leads Mr. Wilson to ask "why Atlanta has to buy milk from southern Mississippi when we have just as good cattle-raising facilities in Georgia?"

There are numerous reasons—but none are such as cannot be overcome and Georgia markets for milk, and every other farm product, be opened to Georgia producers.

Chiefly it is a problem of the creation of a distribution system that will enable the buyers in the cities to depend upon a steady supply of Georgia-grown farm products. The farmers of the state must learn more about grading and preparing their products for the market. There must be co-operative effort between the buyers of the cities and the producers of the rural sections.

It is inexcusable, in view of the productivity of Georgia soil, that Atlanta and the other cities of the state should continue to import millions of dollars' worth of farm products from other sections of the country. Georgia can raise wheat and oats as cheaply as the western grain states, and yet there is not enough produced to care for the requirements of the few mills in the state. Peas and other products of the soil are brought in from as far away as California.

As Mr. Wilson says, "this is something to think about"—especially for the businessmen of Georgia. As is illustrated in the instance of the small Mississippi city to which reference is made, the successful working out of a plan of co-operation must come from the organized business interests in the marketing centers.

The businessmen of Georgia must be awakened to the fact that the aid they extend toward making agriculture more profitable will make their own interests more prosperous because the prosperity of every large community is measured by the soundness of conditions in the agricultural hinterlands of which it is the center.

The farmer is too much of an individualist to permit him to take the lead in the effort to secure steady markets for his products in his nearest city. That lead must be taken by the city men who know how to organize and have the resources with which to launch a mutually beneficial co-operation.

TINY HANDS, OUTSTRETCHED

Children of all ages, face to face with ugliness or some horrifying experience, are prone to screw tight shut their eyes, probably on the unconscious theory that what isn't seen doesn't exist.

Older people, many of them, follow this same theory through life, endeavoring to cure human woes by the simple expedient of denying that sorrow or suffering exists.

There are, strangely enough, some people who do not believe extreme poverty—poverty that means hunger and disease, cold and physical suffering—exists in Atlanta. It would probably be good for these people if they could be taken by the hand and led through some of the miserable shacks some Atlanta families call home.

This, of course, is impossible. Nor would it be desirable, either for the sake of the visiting skeptic or for the poor people themselves. The next best thing to a visit, however, is to read the stories of "The Ten Opportunities" now being published daily by The Constitution.

Read them. Don't shut your eyes to conditions by refusing to read these stories of real suffering among worthy fellow citizens, women and children, most of them who live in this city of ours.

Among them are little children whose father, the breadwinner, has died or deserted his family, or, in some cases, lies bedridden, utterly unable to work. Here, too, are bereaved families of men who could not, or did not, carry life insurance.

Organized charity is far short, financially, of ability to care for the poor in Atlanta this year. Federal relief is unable to continue even the help it has extended. There are scores of homes to which welfare workers would delight in bringing the money to provide essential food and warm clothes, but there is no money to bring.

Read this line from a letter received by The Constitution only Friday last:

"My two little children are barefoot in the cold. The visiting lady would like to give them shoes, but she says there isn't money to buy any. My husband can only get 72 hours of FERA work a month and there are five of us to be fed."

The writer is the mother and her letter is smudged with tears—it appears as though tears had fallen as she wrote.

It is ten families such as this that have been chosen for "Ten Opportunities" of 1935. The Constitution is trying to raise sufficient money to provide them with the bare essentials of life for the coming year.

You can help by sending your contribution, large or small, to The Ten Opportunities Fund, care of The Constitution. Three hundred dollars will care for the average family, with what they can earn themselves, for the year. Yet you are not asked to contribute this entire sum. Just send what you can and, whether it be one dollar, five dollars, ten, twenty, fifty, a hundred or three hundred, it will be equally welcomed and equally appreciated. For we know that each gives according to ability, and the story that He told of the widow who gave a mite, all that she had, to the poor, is the measure of unselfishness in giving, today, as it was 2,000 years ago.

The king of Siam is said to own 24 umbrellas. Well, the poet has said into each life some rain must fall.

Noah was lucky in one respect. After the flood, he didn't have any trouble looking for parking space.

The monkey trails are overwhelming curiosity and love of chatter, says an authority. That's strong talk in favor of evolution.

The boom days will go down as the time when many an investor lost his vest.

Of the Swastika
The Hindu Goddess

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN, European Correspondent of The Constitution.

PARIS, Dec. 15.—The swastika or hooked cross, which the Hitlerites adopted as the emblem of their movement is one of the oldest symbols of humanity. Its origin goes so far back into antiquity that its primitive significance is lost in the mists which envelop the childhood of the human race.

Densities of theories exist with regard to its meaning and the country of its origin. This much is certain, the Egyptians knew it and a famous British archaeologist has established its use as early as the time of the pharaohs.

The Nazis, however, have adopted the symbol in the belief that it is a specifically "Aryan" sign which has come to them from India. They may be right in this, but they may also be wrong. For it is not certain in the least whether the east adopted the symbol from Hitlerites and Mesopotamians or vice versa. This much is certain, that a westerner like myself, a Nordic if you like, receives a lot of good will and even sinister impressions from the contemplation of the black-legged cross on a blood-red field. I can't speak for others, of course. But that is the way it strikes me, namely with a vague, disquieting impact. Is this a remnant of subconscious associations with the past when this sign might have stood for something definite to distant ancestors, on whose minds it was photographed with vivid imprint and relegated to me as a dim negative only to be reactivated after all these years by the sight of the ancient sign? A fine point for the psycho-analysts to ponder! But not for me. At least not now.

Besides Hitler's Germany, there is still India which honors the swastika. In the neighborhood of Calcutta there is a whole conglomeration of temples and altars under this emblem devoted to the cult of the most sanguinary of all deities, the goddess Kali. She is represented as a woman with four arms and three eyes. One eye is turned toward the contemplation of the present and the third is directed to the future. One hand carries a sword with which she cuts off the head of a youth. Her feet stand on the bodies of slain human beings. By way of necklace she wears a string of 15 human skulls. To top the horror the statue above the goddess sticks out an enormous tongue covered with blood and foam.

Hundreds of thousands of pilgrims come every year to venerate this idol of the mighty Kali, the Great Mother, Magna Mater. She is asked to give them a good harvest, a plentiful catch of fish, many children, prosperity and abundance.

Until the British put a stop to it Kali was offered human sacrifices once a year in return for her divine favors. The procedure was as follows, and in secrecy it is very likely still the same. The victim was first of all an elaborate ritual in which figure ablations, censors, mysterious formulas in some dead language, solemn gestures and incantations by the priest, who was a young man. This is the high-point of the service. The assembly of men and women have waited expectantly for this supreme moment. When the head is finally held up by the inspection by the chief priest, pandemonium breaks loose and the body of the victim is torn to shreds by the high priestess. It sounds like a scene from a horror movie. Fortunately the man who can manage to seize a chunk of flesh. In triumph he carries it to his village where it is worshipped as a deity. A visible and tangible particle of the divine victim.

The British authorities, realizing that they had to do with an ancient practice which is rooted in the customs of the people and which has unquestionably served a useful purpose in the past, have been unable to persuade the Kali priests to substitute a lamb for the human victim. Ostensibly the priests acquiesced, which in itself is strange enough. A fanaticism seldom makes a compromise and the suspicion that in secret the same old practice of sacrificing a human being goes on, is not unfounded. The vicarious sacrifice of the lamb, however, produces the same frenzied exaltation on the part of the faithful as once did the slaughter of the young man. Garbed in silver and gold vestments the priests go through the same elaborate liturgy. Finally one of them approaches the lamb on the high altar and cuts its throat with a golden knife. Privileged individuals, who have paid a high price for the right, drink the warm blood. As this goes on the priests sprinkle the blood on the heads of the faithful. The crowd fights to be near the front, for one drop of blood means happiness and prosperity for a whole year.

As the chant and the shouting goes on, people are seized by hysterics. They tear the clothes off themselves. Hundreds are seized by convulsions. The scene before the swastika altar grows wilder and wilder until men and women begin to drop down in a state of total exhaustion or unconsciousness. But the tambourines and the tom-toms continue their monotonous and nerve-whipping rhythm and in the infernal atmosphere not even the sanest man is said, is able to maintain his mental balance. Far into the night the orgy proceeds in the same way. The torches which throw a gruesome light on the idol Kali on her swastika decorated altar, and with her hideous grimace and blood-red tongue.

These are large pieces of change and Mr. Davis, thinking about them and about Christmas week, is feeling very much at a loss. He is feeling like a young John Roosevelt and he wants to do some hiring for the White House's New Year's Eve party.

"Yes, yes, yes," says Mr. Davis, "of course, of course, of course. Then he adds, 'I see, and certainly' and concludes by saying 'yes.' Now it's done and Mr. Davis is hired to supply music for the president's party.

There are a couple of people to be disappointed. Mr. Thomas John Watson's Short Hills, N. J. dinner party has contracted for the services of Mr. Davis on the same evening. And from there he had planned to fly down to Wilmington, Del., to wave a stick at the coming-out party of Miss Alice Du Pont. When the Du Ponts and the Watsons hear the cause they will agree to limp along with Mr. Davis' stick. It seems it's something like a patriotic duty.

Editor Constitution: As chairman of the 1935 Community Chest campaign, I want to express to The Constitution my sincere thanks for the fine publicity given in the recent campaign. Your paper served us in a most effective fashion, attracting the people through your columns, editorials and one-page advertisements as to the needs of the Chest agencies. The splendid results of the campaign, despite our difficulties in overcoming the question of federal relief, could not have been accomplished without the aid of your progressive press.

The Old-Time Strategist Had Nothing on the Modern and North American Newspaper Alliance

NEW YORK, Dec. 12.—The jazz band business, with headquarters here, isn't what it used to be, but it's beginning to come out of the storm cellar.

The men whose names you know—Fred Waring, Meyer Davis, Rudy Vallee, Ben Bernie, etc.—have remained national institutions, but in the last few years, when more notes were blown at them than their expert saxophones could blow back, they have been reduced to the status of more than wave a stick or fiddle around. They are corporation presidents, equipped with large offices, herds of stenographers, accounting departments, salesmen, production men, efficiency experts, publicity men and all the other foldovers that accompany the modern method of doing things. They are no longer the old-time jazz band leaders, but they are still the same old-time jazz band leaders.

A DAY'S WORK.
The jazz corporation president gets to work about noon, takes lunch from 1 o'clock until near 3 and then squares away for a good, straight three hours of high pressure labor. It sounds pleasant. For all we know it is. Because all we know is this:

Meyer Davis is sitting in his office, which overlooks toothy chunks of Manhattan real estate. He is feeling elaborately good. In a room to the right a crooner is moaning. To the left is a banjo twanging piteously and directly under him a soprano is trying to get high G out of a voice that never heard of it.

Just the same, Mr. Davis is feeling good. Because on his desk he has a check for $3,750 from the woman publisher of a famous newspaper, representing the return of a recent evening's value received. That was quite some value received. For Doris Duke paid only $2,500 to listen to his band for an evening, and the much criticized Princess Barbara Huttenlofer, peeled a mere $1,000 off her bankroll for the same privilege.

"Something like old times," admits Mr. Davis, sucking on a pipe. He nods backward to two photostatic copies of checks that hang on the wall. One is for $7,207.50 and represents a night's work at the home of Mr. Clarence Geist, who is in the public utilities business in New York. The second is for $7,940.50 and is the return for an evening of toil at the home of A. A. Watner Kent, the radio magnate. The odd bits of dough the Duke and the Princess mean that the piano had to be tuned.

These are large pieces of change and Mr. Davis, thinking about them and about Christmas week, is feeling very much at a loss. He is feeling like a young John Roosevelt and he wants to do some hiring for the White House's New Year's Eve party.

"Yes, yes, yes," says Mr. Davis, "of course, of course, of course. Then he adds, 'I see, and certainly' and concludes by saying 'yes.' Now it's done and Mr. Davis is hired to supply music for the president's party.

There are a couple of people to be disappointed. Mr. Thomas John Watson's Short Hills, N. J. dinner party has contracted for the services of Mr. Davis on the same evening. And from there he had planned to fly down to Wilmington, Del., to wave a stick at the coming-out party of Miss Alice Du Pont. When the Du Ponts and the Watsons hear the cause they will agree to limp along with Mr. Davis' stick. It seems it's something like a patriotic duty.

New Deal Is in Keeping With Tempo of New Era,
Writes This Georgian

Editor Constitution: It begins to appear that adverse critics of this administration, and of what they probably term the intellectual marathon, being run off by the brain trust at Washington, are shortchanged to the verge of the reactionary. Indeed, those who seem fully alive to the continuing speeding up of the tempo of the world's doings, this country included, are distressingly few; but, fortunately, the President is one of that number—the leader of the cult.

The present civilization had its pioneers in thought and action, else it had not survived; nor had America, but for a Washington, a Jefferson, a Jackson, and a Lincoln. Each era had its leader; each wilderness of the mind and thought and deranged affairs; its Moses—and its carping critics; as well.

These carpers prate of what they regard as the waltz of pseudo-brilliant schemes, that threaten each to tread upon the heels of those in front, and to stumble and pile up in an inchoate mass of misbegotten, unrelated undertakings. So blind are they, very likely, they allocate the New Deal to some future chimerical era.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES.
"That Which Was Lost"

The word "lost," in the generally accepted religious vocabulary, has come to have a technical meaning. It refers to man's destiny after death. According to one's views of the future life, it tells where he is going, and what punishment he is receiving. This conception makes religion a mere provision for the future, and robs it of its vital relation to today. Since it is one of the key words in the teaching of Jesus, we should search for its significance upon His lips.

"Lost" may be used in several different ways. It may refer to something one possessed, and lost. Or one may be seeking a destination, and making the wrong road, he is "lost." Or it may be descriptive of a prize which one might have won, or an opportunity he might have seized, or a personality he might have been, but having failed, he has "lost." One may think of the child of artistic parents, who inherits their genius, taste, and vision. So we say, as we look into the face of this baby, that somewhere within the mystery of his spirit, there is an artist. But there are, also, many other possibilities. The child may claim for food and satisfaction. Prizes which can be measured and marketed, will challenge his powers. Nothing ever awakens the sleeping artist. He is lost, and only a man seeking better for the body, finds expression in his life.

We are always on delicate, and dangerous ground when attempting to interpret the motives of God. Yet it is an irrepressible instinct of the human mind to ask "why," even of God. So one must ask, why did God make "man in His own image?" There seems only one satisfactory answer. It was the parent-longing for children. It was a divine adventure, because if they were to be His children—like Himself—they must have the power to choose for themselves. So all are born with the divine inheritance of the possibility of being His children, with the consciousness of kinship to God. But even God cannot compel this. They must choose for themselves. One thinks of a mother looking into the face of her baby, with all of its possibility of affectionate loyalty and loving companionship. But her dream never comes true. Long years afterward she meets this baby, grown to manhood. She searches his bloated and blurred features for even a suggestion of the man he might have been, but cannot find him. He is lost.

Who Am I?
So the dilemma of the story which Jesus told, was when the boy in the far country "came to himself." The most important question any man can ask of himself, is "Who am I?" Because each one of us strives to play the part which he thinks has been assigned him. Indeed, that is all any one of us can do. We can only strive to be that which we believe ourselves to be. If one thinks he is only an animal, then it is inevitable that he will only live the animal life. "Eat, drink and be merry," why not? That is fulfilling the animal life, and the only life which he can live.

In this story of the lost boy, which Jesus tells, He says that when the boy "came to himself," the first words upon his lips were: "My Father." That is the way he "came to himself," by finding his Father. That is the primary identification of any man. "Who am I?" Who is my father?" All men are in a very real sense born children of God. But just as in our human relationship, one does not make himself a son of his own, until he is conscious of his sonship. Is not this the "born again," of which Jesus spoke? Coming into the consciousness of God as Father? One finds himself in God the Father.

This seems to me to make clear the mission of Jesus. He came into the world to seek, for, say, 10 years, to find the "lost" sons of God, and He did this by revealing God as Father, and men as His children. So, as the Son of God, He spoke to men as His brethren, ever hoping to awaken within them the consciousness of this kinship, that carries everything else of value with it. It is an eternal relationship, and therefore means immortality. It lifts, too, all of our earthly relationships above the earthly, for others are His children, too, and therefore, my brethren. So instead of discussing these relationships of today for these relationships after death, it glorifies them, and makes today a part of eternity.

That will be ready for it. That era is here! Such has been the history of the reactionary in the past, and it will continue to be.

Were the policy of laissez faire applied to crime, for, say, 10 years, what would the gangsters, kidnappers and murderers leave of civilization? They never stand still. Their mark is not just so many jumps ahead of the law, but of their rivals, as well. Fear of death, too, needs their tempo. The President has taken a hand, and results may be, confidently expected—and in this era.

Unfair Plight of Unpaid Doctors Revealed in Comment On Constitution Editorial

The Constitution presents below a number of communications in which outstanding Atlanta physicians comment on the recent editorial, "Unfair to the Doctors," and show the unjust and unfair burden placed upon the medical profession by their failure to receive payment for their services from those who are able to pay. The names of these leading doctors are not presented because of the ethical restrictions of the profession.

THE DOCTORS' UNFAIR BURDEN.

Editor Constitution: The editorial which appeared in The Sunday Constitution of December 2, 1934, entitled "Unfair to the Doctors," raises some interesting questions. As a member of the committee on medical economics of the Fulton County Medical Society in Atlanta, which committee has been studying the problem of medical care and its costs for the past three years, I should like to have the opportunity of calling attention to certain basic facts which explain to a considerable extent the unjust position in which the medical profession finds itself.

In 1929, at a time when the country was enjoying a period of unprecedented prosperity, the average family income out of five were below the "health and decency" level. Since the ravages of depression, the situation is even worse, so that it has been reliably estimated that only approximately 15 per cent of the population are at present able to pay what might be called standard medical fees for service rendered them by physicians. From an economic standpoint there are three classes of citizens; first, the rich; second, the indigent; third, the great middle class.

The editorial referred to is certainly applicable to the first class in those cases where individuals in comfortable circumstances are able to pay for the services and either refuse or neglect to do so.

With regard to the second class, the indigent, they have always received medical care free in so far as the doctor is concerned. This class, however, has now reached such tremendous proportions as to constitute an unbearable burden upon the medical profession. It is estimated that in terms of money this burden amounts to one-third of a billion dollars annually, a burden that should be borne by society as a whole, and not by its medical members. Clinics are crowded while the offices of many private physicians are empty.

Furthermore, the medical service cannot be rendered in clinics. At the present time in many large clinics the average time for interview of each patient is four minutes. Is it not an absurdity to expect a doctor to give efficient treatment to be administered in such a manner?

With regard to the third class, the great middle class, constitutes the bulwark and backbone of the country. It is a proportion of this class can still pay moderate fees for medical service, while others do so with great difficulty, and perhaps a small percentage fail to pay when they could make payment. One of the most accurate and extensive surveys of this situation has been made in the state of Michigan. Dr. Frederick C. W. Connelley, of Grand Rapids, Mich., writing in the December, 1934, Survey Graphic, states that the average remainder of income after the payment of shelter, fuel, food and clothing were paid for was very small, actually a little over $400 a year.

It is not surprising, therefore, that a small surplus, medical care must compete for purchase with insurance, transportation, education, recreation and savings for old age. Medical care is always the least and less considered competitor.

Furthermore, the unpredictable nature of illness makes it difficult, if not impossible, to save for medical emergencies. Statistics appear to show that not over 1 per cent of families set aside any amount of money in advance to take care of medical care in case of illness. These facts, therefore, tend to explain in a very graphic way some of the reasons why physicians are not paid by that class in society upon whom they must depend for a livelihood.

In 1928, when the economic skies appeared to be bright, there was created the insurance industry of medical care, which made an exhaustive study over a period of five years and at a cost of nearly one million dollars. This committee formulated definite conclusions concerning the majority and minority reports. These reports have formed the basis of further extensive studies as well as widespread and often acrimonious controversy, not only on the part of physicians themselves, but of the public.

Out of this welter of discussion there seems to have emerged the fact that the age-old methods of remuneration for medical care need revision. The December, 1934, issue of the Survey Graphic, devoted to the subject, contains a symposium on the subject, "Buying Health," which is well worth the perusal of all the professions engaged in health and medicine, as well as the public. As William Truitt Foster remarks in this periodical: "Some means must be found of freeing the science of medicine from the economics of medicine."

This necessity is even further enhanced by the fact that the costs of medical care have unavoidably increased over a number of years. This is due to the fact that the progress of science has necessitated the employment of expensive instruments of precision, and methods of diagnosis and treatment which have been of vast aid in rendering adequate and competent medical service. The day is forever gone when the old family physician could feel the pulse, look at the tongue and leave a few remedies from his satchel at a cost of only a few dollars. On the one hand we see scientifically trained and equipped physicians with all the paraphernalia of modern equipment, ready and eager to serve, and on the other hand thousands, even millions, in dire need of such service, but unable to secure it for financial reasons. As a result, society is suffering, and the income of the medical profession as a whole has sunk to an alarming and pathetic extent.

The Fulton County Medical Society in Atlanta, through its committee on medical economics, has not been unaware of the situation, and has even had the temerity to inaugurate a definite specific plan in an effort to relieve the situation. Since April 1, 1934, the Fulton County Medical Society, through its committee on medical economics, has offered to care for persons of the low income group upon the payment, by such persons, of a small monthly sum. Out of the membership of approximately 400 physicians, 287 signified their willingness to serve.

When illness overtakes an individual who has joined this association he will be rendered medical service by the physician of his choice, and the bill will be paid by the relief association. The plan, sketched in the most outline here, is a constructive effort which its directors feel should merit a wider attention on the part of the public and the medical profession. It is a purely voluntary plan in contradistinction to the compulsory health insurance plans of most of the European countries. There has been a steady, but modest growth in the membership, and the plan has excited the interest of medical organizations over the United States.

In conclusion, I feel that The Constitution would be rendering a very distinct service, not only to the medical profession, but to the public at large, by enlisting the interest of a larger number of the community in the problem of medical care, and by pointing out the ways in which the medical profession is being unfairly treated.

Editor Constitution: Your editorial, "Unfair to the Doctor," has received much favorable comment from different members of the profession. At our regular meeting last night attention was called to it and the solution which was suggested by the society that you be written a letter of thanks for writing this timely editorial.

Editor Constitution: Those who do not know the conditions of the inside of the practice of medicine cannot appreciate what the doctors have lived through during the past four years. It is true that some of us have had a small surplus, but even we do an immense amount of work for people who could pay but neglect to do so.

In 1929, the average American doctor was making $7,000 a year. When his overhead was deducted you can readily see that he did not have a great amount left. In 1932 the average doctor was making $5,000 a year. When his overhead was deducted he had practically nothing left.

I have had great sympathy for my brother practitioners and could not resist the temptation of expressing to you my great appreciation of your editorial.

Editor Constitution: You have summarized the situation of the medical profession in the view which you expound as to the earnestness, anxiousness, and devotion of the medical profession in the view of the public. The majority of physicians never consider whether they will be richly rewarded from a financial standpoint or not. The unfortunate part of the matter is that the medical practice is not only not to physicians receive no compensation for some of the work they do but further they are not even given the thanks, and very frequently unjust criticism when they have done the best that they possibly could under the circumstances.

I doubt very seriously if there is any single group of professional men who have invested as much time and money in preparing themselves for their professional duties, who work as hard, and who receive as little for what they do as the average practitioner of medicine.

Editor Constitution: Your editorial reflects your helpful attitude on all matters pertaining to the welfare of the medical profession. It is well known that in the last few years and I believe that your editorial clearly emphasizes the stand that the public should take in dealing with the medical men of Atlanta.

Editor Constitution: As a member of the medical profession I wish to thank you for the very timely and just editorial in The Sunday Constitution of December 2, 1934, "Unfair to the Doctor."

The editorial is timely because the medical profession has suffered immeasurable financial losses during the past years. It is, because some patients who are well able to pay have placed the doctor's bill last on the list, taking advantage of the present financial straits, and will not deter the doctor from continuing to put forward his best efforts to improve the physical fitness of our citizenship.

Suppose Shakespeare had undertaken to build steel bridges across rivers, and that Eads, the noted structural engineer, had essayed the role of writing plays? Suppose Beethoven, the greatest genius who ever lifted a baton above the empire of sound, had undertaken politics, and that Thomas Jefferson had attempted grand opera? Suppose Patrick Henry, suppressing indignation, repression, nervousness, the craving for physical activity, the strength and the ability to move vast audiences, had attempted instead, to sit patiently at a jeweler's bench, placing tiny wheels in a watch, and that a jeweler, patient, detailed and artistic, had attempted to be a Patrick Henry? I know a physician whose genius in the field of medicine has enabled him to rise to the top of his profession. He was asked to give his personal analysis of the position of the Japanese delegation at the London conference. There appears to be a misunderstanding as to our views. There are two important points in our new proposal. The first is that equality or parity should be attained in the naval strength of the powers concerned. ## Voices Strong Opposition To Changes in Present Legislative Structure

Editor Constitution: I see that a number of young legislators have announced that they will overhaul the present legislative structure. They say our legislative body is too large and unwieldy. They further say that we should have but one house in our legislative structure to make our laws. They also add that in this practical age, legislation should move more swiftly. They also claim that it costs the state too much to hold a session of the legislature made up of representatives from each county as now provided for.

When our forefathers made two houses in our legislative department, they understood fully what they were doing. They understood that the body would be slow in action and results; but they had the rights and interests of the people in mind when they wrote the constitution. They also recognized the necessity of having two houses in order that these two houses would serve as a balance against each other for the protection of the rights of the people and the preservation of the state.

They believed it was best that all legislation make haste slowly in order that every right and interest of the masses might be safeguarded. The present structure of our legislative department is an ideal one. The power to check unwieldy legislation is a principle of the constitution and should not be destroyed. The two houses assure protection to the rights of the people. The lower house is about as nearly the voice of the people, speaking into the legislative chamber, as it is possible to be. Each county has its representative, fresh from the people and known personally to every voter in his district. Close to the people who elect him, no representative in the lower house of the general assembly of Georgia will be able to go wrong on legislative measures.

The legislators come from many small counties and a few large counties. They are the best of the people. Through their close touch with these many representatives, the people now rule the state and make their laws. Alexander Hamilton said: "The people are great. They are the basis of our government. They are the source of all power. They are the only safe depository of the rights of the masses." This movement to consolidate counties, which are now the political units of the state, into assembly districts, so that one man may represent an assembly district made up of many counties, is a movement to consolidate the power of the people into the hands of a few, control our legislative department, and virtually deprive the people of their power in making laws.

There are no sound arguments for a change in our present legislative and judicial departments in Georgia. At our regular meeting last night attention was called to it and the solution which was suggested by the society that you be written a letter of thanks for writing this timely editorial.

How To Grow Sweet Peas

By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN

Is there any flower in all nature's wonderful collection that has the dainty freshness of the sweet pea? I think not.

Sweet peas fill that early summer gap in our year-round flower chain that nothing else can. Sweet peas are so refreshing in their sweetness. They make us feel pure and clean and lift us up from the ordinary thoughts of life. Unfortunately, they bloom for only a few weeks during the warm days and cool nights of early summer, but even at that the abundance of reward is doubly ample for the slight effort in producing them.

And thanks to our tireless plant breeders we have now the Early Flowering Spencer strain that extends the season two weeks by having them bloom that much earlier than the regular Spencers. Perhaps I had best stop to explain that there are three types of sweet peas:

1. Grandiflora—the old-fashioned small flowered type.

2. Large Spencers—the new large, wavy petaled type having extra long stems.

3. Early Flowering large Spencers—extra early selection of large Spencers having the same large, wavy petals but coming two weeks earlier than the regular Spencers.

To be successful in growing sweet peas it is necessary only to provide five requirements, all of which are very simple to carry out: good seed, good soil, drainage and inoculation.

PLANT SWEET PEAS IN A TRENCH, 6 IN. DEEP AND 3 IN. APART

AS THE VINE GROWS UPWARD, FILL IN THE TRENCH

TRAINED ON A POST OR STAKE AS DIAGRAMED

Good seed is necessary for the strongest, most vigorous plants of the finest new strains. Poor seed lack vigor and breeding.

Good soil is necessary for heavy development of the growing plants. They are heavy feeders, particularly during the flowering period.

Good drainage is most necessary because sweet peas will not stand excessive moisture. When the roots rot in water the plants seem to mold and die.

Inoculation with the proper soil bacteria is desirable, especially in soil that has never been used before. Sweet peas have not grown before. Inoculation is as important to the farmer who plants vetch and clover and field peas in his fields as it is to the gardener who grows sweet peas.

Sweet peas may be sown in the latitude of Atlanta during December for fall planting and from early February until the middle of March for the spring crop.

The idea in fall planting is to get the seed sprouted and root growth begun before severe cold and wet weather sets in. The seedlings are then covered with a layer of straw or manure and the large early flowers that are superior to those from spring planting.

In preparing the trench, it is vital to dig out the old roots and weeds and to dig out the old roots and weeds and to dig out the old roots and weeds.

It is in the very best time of the year to plant sweet peas for the earliest and largest flowers on the longest and strongest stems.

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED BY RALPH T. JONES

'White Parade' at Paramount Is Dramatic Screen Narrative

One of the most human, compelling and dramatic screen narratives in years, Jesse L. Lasky's "The White Parade," now playing at the Paramount, is recommended as superlative entertainment, as a story with a soul.

"The White Parade" may be described as an extraordinary picture. Extraordinary not only in its material, but in approach of the Director, Irving Cummings and Producer Lasky to the telling of their story. It is a gripping and poignant drama, and the manner of its presentation—buoyant, easy, skillful—is a distinct contribution to screen history.

Loretta Young offers a masterly performance as the young student nurse who is the hero. The film follows her schooling from the day of her enrollment, until, just graduated, she has to make her choice between the man she loves, John Boles, and the service whose true meaning has become every day more clear to her.

John Boles contributes a splendid characterization of the rich young suitor who, baffled by the elusive secrets of these girl nurses, seeks to persuade her that her life dies with him. There are memorable performances also by Dorothy Wilson, Muriel Kirkland and Astrid Allwyn, among the heroine's comrades, and by Jane Darwell and Sarah Haden, as veteran nurses who are their superiors.

"The White Parade" has been adapted by Sonya Levien and Ernest Pascal from a screen story by Brian James and Jesse Lasky Jr. This last in turn was based on Rian James' novel of the same title.

Jesse L. Lasky has always been a pioneer. His own career parallels in many respects the history of the motion-picture industry. It was Lasky who gave us such pictures as "The Covered Wagon," the first great picture of the west, and "Wings," the first great picture of the air.

Now in "The White Parade," he has created a picture which for originality and drama will stand unsurpassed when it is as old as "The Covered Wagon."

Reginald Owen, who played Louis XV with George Arliss in "Voltaire," again portrays the same monarch, this time in his 60th year. Victor Jory, as the powerful Duc d'Alençon, Osgood Perkins as "Richelieu," who turns Du Barry over to the king; Verree Teasdale, as the Duchess de Grammont, Du Barry's bitterest enemy; Ferdinand Gottschalk as the immitable valet, Label; Anita Louise, as Marie Antoinette; and Dorothy Tree, Maynard Holmes, Henry O'Neill, Howard Cavanaugh, Helen Lowell and Joan Wheeler, all of whom have important roles, enact their parts with spirit and skill. William Dieterle directed with fine understanding of the historical value of the picture.

Short subjects on the program include a Ben Blue comedy titled, "The Prize Sap," and a Paramount Picture of intense and vivid situations, it is a comedy, one of the funniest screened in many seasons; it is a spectacle, for the superb costuming and magnificence of the settings beggar the imagination, while the dancing of the Albatross girls is something marvelous. Warner Brothers have outdone themselves in producing this masterpiece of the most glamorous period of history.

He has a most important role in the feature, critics over the entire country have given him much praise in all of the reviews.

Du Barry, as presented on the stage by Mrs. Leslie Carter and on the silent screen by Pola Negri, was the consummate politician, who used her charms to further her own and her sponsor, Richelieu's, ambitions. The Del Rio "Du Barry" is a madcap boyden, in love with life, who kept her bargain with the king, who lived and loved mightily and laughingly, and who laughingly went to the prison to which Marie Antoinette, after Louis XV's death, consigned her.

"Madame Du Barry" is a dream, full of

Pre-Holiday Offerings in Atlanta's Leading Theaters

'One Exciting Adventure' Stars English Beauty at the Capitol

Glamour, thrills, romance and humor are highlights of the new first-run picture, "One Exciting Adventure," which will open at the Capitol theater today, and which stars the vivacious new screen star, Binnie Barnes, who is slated to be a combination of Garbo and Dietrich, but with a charm and beauty that is all her own. Neil Hamilton, Eugene Pallette and Grant Mitchell play opposite Miss Barnes in this production.

The new stage show, for the week, brings Franklin's "Fantasy Folies," a novelty show which features a group of vaudeville stars that no doubt will please in delightful manner.

Among the starring names in the stage show are the Three Sailors, presenting riotous comedy; Martha Ray, blues singer; Stan Davis, stated to be clever with comedy; the Val Jean Sisters, two clever pieces of humanity; the famous Franklin Troupe, Arabian acrobatic tumblers; Joe and His Pals, trained dog novelties; Paul and his beautiful girls and the Folly Boys' stage band, augmented with Enrico Leide's Capitolians. Mr. Leide will feature the overture, "The Glow Worm," for the week.

The Capitol box office opens on Sunday's at 1:45 p. m., with the first subject going on the screen at 2 o'clock and the first stage show at 2:15 p. m. Patrons who attend this first show are assured of missing the larger crowds of the afternoon.

The story of "One Exciting Adventure" is that of one of the most colorful and beautiful women of Europe, who intrigued all men but who is not interested in love, only in the glitter of diamonds. The picture opens with Paul Cavanaugh, a sinister and charming admirer, who has followed her

Douglas Fairbanks as of Old Returns in 'Life of Don Juan'

The Douglas Fairbanks in "The Private Life of Don Juan," now at Loew's Grand theater, is very much the same genial, lively comedian, dashing and swaggering, who vaulted his way into the movie-going public's heart some 15 years ago. Surrounded by a notable English cast, including such stunning English beauties as Binnie Barnes, Merle Oberon and Benita Hume, he brings his old vigor and enthusiasm back to the screen in a memorable entertainment.

Alexander Korda, director of "The Private Life of Henry the Eighth," directed this film, from a story written by that smart and ingenious English playwright, Frederick Lonsdale, author of a dozen great stage successes.

"The Private Life of Don Juan" is an ironical story, showing how, after years of rioting, Don Juan is brought to bay by his own wife. Through all the years she has secretly loved him. She has awaited in Seville, paying all her husband's debts, while he traveled throughout Europe, generally valued by creditors and indignant husbands, or else by women who couldn't forget him, once they have fallen in love.

As the first opens, Don Juan is returning to Seville—secretly, in fear of arrest. He learns, with great perturbation, that an impostor claims he is the notorious Juan, and that, on the strength of Juan's reputation, this impostor is winning all the Seville ladies. Juan is naturally indignant, but not for long—an outraged husband lays the impostor.

Believing the great Don Juan dead all the Seville ladies mourn. Meanwhile, Juan watches, with mingled emotions, the grief of the various mourners. Touched at last by this display, he decides to assuage their grief, to reveal himself to them, to assure them the great Juan still lives.

But many of the women will believe his claims. They all believe that he is the impostor. For the first time in his life, Don Juan finds love-making futile and unsuccessful. One lady even complains that she still loves him. Juan has to employ all the wiles he has ever devised before Dolores will relent and forgive him.

"Here Comes the Navy," Friday's and Saturday's feature attraction, is a rollicking comedy-drama, of beautiful girls and romantic sailors. James Cagney heads a cast featuring Pat O'Brien and Gloria Stuart.

"Now and Forever" at Tenth Street for three days.

Beginning the second week of its return to second and third run pictures at popular neighborhood prices, the Tenth Street theater presents for its feature attraction Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, "Now and Forever," starring Shirley Temple, the screen's most talented and loved child. Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard supply the romantic interest.

Wednesday and Thursday the inevitable Will Rogers will be seen in "Handy Andy," a homespun story of a small town druggist. Peggy Wood and Mary Carlisle head the able supporting cast.

"A Crooner's Contest" is being sponsored by Atlanta's newest neighborhood theater on Cherokee avenue. This contest will determine the best boy and girl vocalist in the city and the winners will receive a contract to sing as feature vocalists with one of the south's leading dance orchestras.

No vocal training is required for the entrants, and the age limit is up to 27 years of age. Small children cannot compete for the grand prizes, but will win other awards.

This is the first time a crooner's contest has been held in this city and much interest is already being shown. The various entrants sing from a microphone on the theater stage, and the audience acts as judge.

The contest is open to all residents of Atlanta.

BUCKHEAD PLAYS "FLYING TO RIO" ON SUNDAY BILL

"Flying Down to Rio," with Ginger Rogers, Fred Astaire, Dolores Del Rio and Gene Raymond, is the offering at the Buckhead today. This is one of the most charming and delightful pictures produced in recent months. The scenes which show girls dancing on top of aeroplanes flying high in the clouds afford many laughs and thrills.

"Ladies Should Listen," a Paramount picture, is the attraction on Monday and Tuesday. This is a lively, fast-moving farce comedy, with Cary Grant and Frances Drake.

"You Belong to Me," starring Lee Tracy, Helen Mack and one of the juvenile stars of Hollywood, little David Jack Holt, will show Thursday and Friday. A small boy, playing his part in a natural and appealing way, effects a reconciliation between his parents. Humor and heart appeal, skillfully blended, make good entertainment.

On Saturday the picture is "Solitaire Man," with Herbert Marshall, Elizabeth Allen, Lionel Atwill, Ralph Forbes, May Robson and others. This is a stirring interest-holding drama from the studios of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

As is always true at the Buckhead, suitable and interesting short subjects chosen with a view to rounding out bills for varied and interesting programs will be shown each day.

Rialto To Show Musical 'Dames' Opening Monday

Responding to requests from many of his regular patrons, Manager W. T. Murray, of the Rialto theater, has secured the spectacular Warner Brothers' musical and dance picture, "Dames," for showing the first half of the pre-Christmas week. It will start its three-day engagement there on Monday.

The George Arliss film, "The Last Gentleman," ends a highly successful four-day showing with the last show tonight.

"Dames" is described as easily the most impressive musical ever made by Warner Brothers, the studio famous for its lavish productions of this type. Busby Berkeley, the famous producer of sensational dance creations, has 300 of Hollywood's most beautiful chorines at his command in this picture and the evolutions he puts them through, the picture he arranges with their gorgeous costuming and lovely forms are enough to make a sybarite arise from the grave he has occupied for a hundred years.

Headed the cast of "Dames" are Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell, Zasu Pitts, Guy Kibbee, Hugh Herbert, as well as scores of other favorite players. It was directed by Ray Enright, while the numerous song hits were created by three of Hollywood's most successful song-writing teams, Warren and Dubin, Pain and Kahal, and Dixon and Wrubel.

The story, which of course is only secondary in importance, concerns an eccentric millionaire with a complex for moral reform, which is tricked into an involvement with a gold digger. Aided by some highly alcoholized couch medicine.

The romance concerns the millionaire's niece and a youthful producer of music shows and it is unnecessary to mention that everything works out smoothly at the end.

It is grand holiday entertainment and the girls are beyond argument the most gorgeous yet seen in any production.

Clever holiday season short subjects round out the program which will run through Wednesday.

Orr-Roan Wedding Solemnized At Beautiful Ceremony in Newnan

NEWNAN, Ga., Dec. 15.—Highlighting the calendar of pre-holiday social events here was the beautiful nuptial ceremony at which Miss Eleanor Orr, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Orr, became the bride of Charles Moseley Roan, of Palmetto and Atlanta, at 6 o'clock this evening at the home of the bride's parents on LaGrange street. A fashionable assemblage of friends and relatives from Newnan, Atlanta, Palmetto and other cities witnessed the ceremony at which the Rev. C. C. Thomas, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Newnan, officiated.

The Orr home presented a scene of floral beauty for the occasion, with an effective color motif of green and white featuring the elaborate decorations of palms, ferns, giant white chrysanthemums, and fragrant roses. Australian tree ferns and tall palms were massed to form an altar in the living room where the nuptial vows were taken. Huge clusters of white chrysanthemums and seven-branched cathedral candelabra, holding tall white tapers, interspersed the background of foliage. From the foot of the stairway to the living room an aisle was formed by white standards topped with clusters of white chrysanthemums and caught with white satin ribbons.

In the dining room the exquisitely appointed bride's table was graced in the center with an oblong plateau of white roses fringed with valley lilies. The stair rail was twined with garlands of smilax and caught at intervals with clusters of white chrysanthemums.

An appropriate program of music was rendered by Mrs. L. C. Spradlin, pianist; Miss Rosalyn Brown, violinist; and Miss Margaret Trappett, soloist.

Miss Emma Orr, younger sister of the bride, acted as her maid of honor, and another sister, Mrs. Bradley Wilkinson, served as matron of honor. They wore similar gowns of fragile silk lace fashioned on princess lines and featuring the becoming off-the-shoulder décolletage, which was caught in the front with a handsome rhinestone clip. The close-fitting skirts achieved circular flares below the knees and ended in brief trains in the back. Miss Orr's gown was of ethereal blue lace, and Mrs. Wilkinson's of petal pink. Graceful shower bouquets of Columbia roses completed the lovely costumes.

Ballard Hudson, of Palmetto, cousin of the bridegroom, and Braxton Blacklock Jr., of Atlanta and Harvey, Ill., cousin of the bride, were the groomsmen. I. N. Orr gave his daughter in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the bridegroom and his cousin, Thomas E. Arnold, of Palmetto and Atlanta, who acted as best man.

The patrician beauty of the bride was emphasized by her wedding robes of lustrous white satin, cut on simple, graceful lines, and molded closely to her slender figure. The gown was untrimmed, the severity being relieved by the exquisite rose point lace veil, which was brought from Europe by the bride's aunt, the late Mrs. W. C. Adamson, whose name she bears. The veil was posed over folds of illusion tulle which entirely covered the shimmering satin train of the gown, and it fell from a becoming cap of pleated tulle, caught at either side of the face with clusters of orange blossoms. Completing the bridal ensemble was an arm bouquet of gardenias showered with valley lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. Orr were hosts at an informal wedding reception following the ceremony. Mrs. Orr received her guests wearing a handsome gown of black velvet, made with a becoming high neckline outlined with real lace. Her flowers were a cluster of gardenias. Mrs. Benjamin Roan, of Palmetto, mother of the bridegroom, who assisted in receiving, chose for the occasion a gown of black velvet with a yoke of sequins sewed on black net. Completing her costume was a spray of gardenias.

Assisting in entertaining the guests were Mrs. William A. Ward and Mrs. Braxton Blacklock, of Atlanta; Mrs. Stewart Coley, of Grantville; Miss Mary Goodrum, Mrs. Ella Norris, Mrs. Annie F. Orr, and Mrs. David Cuttino, all of Newnan.

Mrs. Charles B. Moseley, of Palmetto, grandmother of the bridegroom, wore black chiffon and lace, offset with a cluster of white orchids and valley lilies. Mrs. D. B. Blacklock, aunt of the bride, wore an imported gown of gold crepe, and Mrs. William A. Ward, another aunt, was gowned in black lace over black crepe. Their flowers were yellow roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Marion Morris, of Atlanta, sister of the bridegroom, was an attractive figure wearing red chiffon, with shoulder cluster of fragrant gardenias.

Mr. Roan and his bride left for a wedding journey by motor to New Orleans, and upon their return will take possession of their new home in Palmetto.

Among the guests from a distance who attended the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. William A. Ward, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Ward Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Carl Reeves.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal couples were honor guests at a breakfast at which Ben Rogers, father of Mrs. Mann, was host. The two couples left for a wedding trip through Tennessee and Kentucky.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman are at home in their new home on Jonesboro road, while Mr. and Mrs. Mann have taken possession of their home near Mann's lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Patman Hold Golden Wedding.

ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 15.—Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Patman, of Athens, Ga., entertained informally on December 2 in celebration of their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

The lower floor of the home was artistically decorated with southern smilax and large yellow chrysanthemums interspersed with silver candelabra holding burning tapers.

Mrs. Patman wore a becoming dress of black chiffon velvet with touches of gold. Her corsage was of tallies roses and lavender and pink sweet peas. No cards were issued but scores of friends and relatives called during the receiving hours to offer congratulations and best wishes.

Mr. and Mrs. Patman were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. J. Everette Patman, Miss Eula Flake Patman, Mrs. Verina Patman Means, Alfred Means, Misses Elizabeth Means, Annie Patman and Clyde Patman.

Mrs. Braxton Blacklock, Braxton Blacklock Jr., Mrs. Lynn Fort, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Howell, Mrs. Lamar Lipscomb, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Morris, all of Atlanta; Mrs. Charles B. Moseley, and Mrs. Benjamin Roan, of Palmetto.

Highlights of Broadway by Jack Lait

WE were talking, in the new Waldorf-Astoria bar, of the old Waldorf-Astoria bar of sainted memories, about which reverent books have been written and which has gone into the native saga as a legend and a tradition.

And so we talked of other famous bars of prohibition days—that one in the late Knickerbocker Hotel at Broadway and 42nd Street, where Maxfield Parrish's classic "Old King Cole" hung over the original Palmer House bar, sporting a square of Chicago; of the Celtic bar in the Sherman, at Clark and Randolph, a world hangout; of the Cliff House in San Francisco, Barney Oldfield's and the Saddle Rock and Brink's in Los Angeles, the Pub in Milwaukee, Fane's in St. Louis, Ramos' and the Louisiana and Fabacher's in New Orleans, the Piedmont and Harry Silverman's and the Isle of Champagne in Atlanta, the Boody House in Toledo, the Claypool in Indianapolis, Otto Seelbach's in Louisville, the Alcazar and Barton's in Denver, the Belvedere in used in "The Front Page", Walter Howey, Bill Stuart and his brother, Charles; Clyde Tavenor, who went to Congress—and Sam Small, Jr., brilliant son of the great evangelist, who bent an elbow like a true minister's son.

Ben Hecht, Jess Kruger, Charlie McArthur, "Jake" Lingle and Louella Parsons came a decade or so behind my start, but worked with or against me in Chicago.

N. B. Spingold, now vice-president of Columbia Pictures, shared a bachelor flat with me, though he was my deadliest "opponent."

Back of the elegant semi-circular new Waldorf-Astoria bar, I recognized none less than "Curley" O'Connor, who had tended the old Waldorf bar and tended it as a bar should be tended. He started with the house in 1898 and has been on the "wise" side of a bar ever since. How and where, during the great drought, it is not for highlights to tip off.

"Curley" is now head bartender (or as the crude Ted Sauter elegantly puts it, "senior barkeeper"). He must be past 60, but he doesn't look 40. He has always taken a nip or two daily, but never, of course, on duty. He has served not less than 10,000,000 drinks, he estimates. He stands now before the old bronze bull and bear which were the symbolic figures behind the old bar—but, as a concession to the lamented 1929 which intervened, there is now a little white figure of a tiny shorn lamb between them.

Baltimore, the Occidental in Washington. I had loved my thirst at each and all of these.

Of course, since most of my adult life before prohibition was spent in Chicago, with the foremost bars in that city I am most familiar. Besides the ones already noted, there were Vogel's, a newspaperman's retreat, rivaled only by Stillson's and De Costa's and Manger's, the Colonel and Righeimer's, Schlogli's, the Steuben County, Thibodeaux's and Weber's in the Union Hotel; on the West Side the play went to Skidmore's (where I had my first drink of whiskey, across the street from my school) and Mike Fritz's Arsonia; North, the Red Star and the notorious McGurk Brothers; South, Buxbaum's, the Auditorium, Dave Levinson's Congress, and like Bloom's.

Chicago, in those days, downed most of its liquor standing up. We drank at the bar and ate at home. There wasn't much table drinking. Scotch was rare, and we used to snicker at strangers who asked for it. Our drink was bourbon and the bartenders asked no questions—just slid the bottle down the mahogany. The tariff was two-for-a-quarter, and if one drank alone and only one helping, he paid 15 cents and got a brass check with the name of the house embossed on it and inscribed "Good for 2 1/2 Cents in Trade." Happy days!

We newspapermen used to drink plenty, but rarely went overboard. We visited the bar many times a day and usually didn't stay there very long at any time. We drank standing up—and we could drink and stand up. It was a hardy crew, my contemporaneous aggregation of Chicago reporters, and many of them came through to fame and glory. Among them were: Walter Wilcox, now managing editor of the Herald-Tribune; Julian Mason, recently editor of the N. Y. Evening Post; Walter Hackett, rich playwright in London; Francis Hackett, who wrote "Henry VIII"; Tom Bourke, Cliff Raymond, Jim O'Shaughnessy, Carl Van Vechten, the novelist; the late Bill Vecek, who became a proxy of the Cubs; John Kelly, the sage of Erie, Pa.; Eddie Dougherty, famous writer; Joseph Medill Patterson, Dick Little, George Wharton, Sam Lederer, Al Johnson and his brother Billy (immortal-before opening the new department on a question which could not have been debated in "those days."

"Shall ladies be admitted to the bar?"

With all chivalry for "our wives, mothers and sweethearts," it seems the gentleman to a man with a resounding "NO!"

Except for speakings—and that went from the low gurgles to the most gingerbread high-toned ruses—he never wanted females standing up beside them at public bars. I hope they never will.

In truth, Ted's news release states: "The table effect, while modern in feeling, is nevertheless restful and definitely masculine in character."

And that's how a bar should be—restful and definitely masculine. That is not necessarily tautological. The ideas are just natural twins when contemplating the bar, which is an indigenous American manifestation (that has been plagiarized around the globe) and has been an institution through the robust chapters of our nation-making history. France may have its al fresco cafes, England its pubs and inns, Germany its weinstuben, Switzerland its beerhallen and Italy its red-ink table d'hotes. But America started as a bar-drinking tribe, and may it henceforth stay that way.

A SMILE FOR THE SCHOOLMARM Expressive Close-Up of Archduke Albrecht, of the Criticized House of Hapsburg, Who's Planning to Divorce His Wife Irene, and Marry a Pretty, Rustic Teacher with Whom He Fell in Love While Shooting Birds in Hungary.

By a Staff Correspondent.

BUDAPEST.

THE Imperial Opera House was aglow with light and pulsating with color, vibrant with melody and resonant of applause. Small wonder; for a favorite ballet was being performed before a packed house.

Centre of the attention was the premiere ballerina, beautiful Baroness Elvira de Vecsey, who in spite of very blue blood and a genuine title does not disdain to shake a bewitching toe for Art and a weekly stipend.

Peer into that box draped in royal purple velvet. You glimpse there a gentleman who admires the Baroness a lot, but only platonically. He is Archduke Albrecht, of the once splendid House of Hapsburg. He is son of the fiery Field Marshal, Archduke Ferdinand, and an indifferent claimant to the throne of a new Austro-Hungary.

In a less conspicuous corner of the theatre sits a dark, beautiful, tragic-looking woman. She is Mrs. Irene Leisch von Rudnay, former wife of Lajos von Rudnay, Hungarian minister to Bulgaria, and later the morganatic wife of Archduke Albrecht.

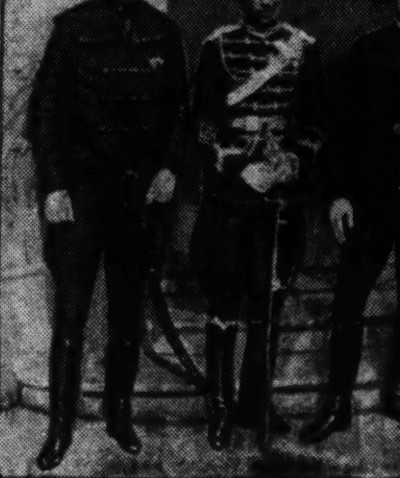

Irene looks sad, but not a bit sad is that stout gentleman with the moustache and the diplomatic decoration who is ecstatically twitching his way through the performance a few seats from Irene. It's Lajos himself, no less. His eyes devour the dancing Baroness. Lajos is terribly in love with her.

You're perfectly right. And a runaround, furthermore, that is whirling with gay divorces, past and present.

Let us, therefore, examine briefly the past, confederate and individual, of these four principals in the case, and a fifth yet to be heard from.

Albrecht, a cousin twice removed of tragic Emperor Karl, is by the same broken kin of Karl's son, slim, sulky Otto, whose designing mother, "Empress" Zita, has for a decade nourished the notion of putting the key on the Austro-Hungarian throne, if any. Both Austrian and Hungarian royalists have consistently acclaimed Otto as the legitimate claimant—but the chances of a restoration are feeble.

Crafty Isabella, before her recent death, hoped to thwart Zita and Otto by making her son, Albrecht, Emperor. At first Albrecht indeed a flint ear to this proposal. But it was a half-hearted gesture, and all bets were off the moment Albrecht saw Irene.

This momentous event took place at The Hague, where Irene and her husband, Lajos, then Hungarian minister to Holland, were stopping. Albrecht had been sent to The Hague in the hope that he would fall for Princess Juliana of the Netherlands, marry her and cement an enduring friendship between her country and his.

When Isabella heard of her boy's infatuation for the minister's wife, she hastily dispatched him on a trip to South America to "renew his health." Not to be manipulated thus, Albrecht went instead to London—where he again met Irene, who meanwhile had been divorced.

Romantic and hurried marriage! Blissful honeymoon! As for the crown and sceptre—pooh! Al wanted no part of them. He had Irene!

Isabella was furious. So were the other royalists. Only von Rudnay didn't seem to mind much. He beamed on his ex-wife and her new husband. All this was in 1930.

Irene, installed after her second marriage in a sumptuous villa in Tempest Street, Budapest, must have heard of her volatile mate's interest in the Hortabagy belle; for domestic rumpuses, tempestuous and protracted, are reported to have been enacted between her and Albrecht there.

Divorces impends on a lowering marital horizon.

Now consider Lajos von Rudnay. Losing Irene didn't heartbreak him—long. He saw the Baroness Elvira de Vecsey dancing and became a big devotee of the ballet's art. He now faces his own little dilemma, also, for if and when he marries the Baroness Elvira, he will probably write the end to his career as a diplomatist.

So von Rudnay in all probability will turn in his portfolio and become Private Citizen No. 1 before his wedding bells peal. He's deliciously happy at the prospect. So's Albrecht, nursing dreams of marrying his schoolmarm.

Irene's sad, sad and lonely. The schoolmarm. Nobody seems to know the precise state of her emotions.

A 6-FOOT SNAKE IS HER NECKLACE

PSYCHOLOGISTS have often tried to explain why some people are afraid of cats, dogs, snakes and other members of the animal kingdom, while other persons take these animals, domestic or wild, and easily make pets out of them. These learned men try to solve this problem by telling us that it all depends on whether or not you have a "fixation" on animals; some shock or scare you've received when a baby.

Surely the woman in the photo on the right hasn't any anti-serpentine "fixation." She's Mrs. H. N. Murphy, of London, and she's chosen a snake from Brazil as her pet. The affectionate fellow is six feet long and in his playful moments curls himself around her neck.

Being very fond of her pet, Mrs. Murphy takes exceptionally good care of him. The snake's birthplace was a warm climate; so he naturally needs a rather high temperature to do his sleeping in. Mrs. Murphy, therefore, had an electrically heated glass case constructed to protect Mr. Boa from the fog and damp air of London.

Why WOMEN LOVE the MEN THEY THINK THEY HATE

By Helen Welshimer

IF you think that you hate a tall young man, or a fat young man, or any other kind of a man—if you stay awake at night thinking of the nice, sharp pins that you would like to stick into his comfortable dreams—well, you might as well get wise to the fact that you love him!

For hatred and love are as closely affiliated as Siamese twins.

If you go to sleep calmly, not caring whether the man is walking the streets in the rain without his overshoes, making amorous speeches to a chorus girl or a chambermaid, or calling your own telephone number, he will never, never again send arctic chills ambulating up and down your spine.

And indifference is the antithesis of love.

Dr. Elaine Elmore, who is associated with the University of Paris, well-known psychologist and consultant adviser in problems of life adjustment and character development, believes that when a man or woman is certain of his or her affection for another, the one who would woo and win must erect a structure of harmony and understanding.

In order to make the foundations of love as solid as possible the two people must understand each other, and each must understand himself. The latter is decidedly important!

IF you want to be happy in your marriage, first of all understand yourself," Dr. Elmore advises. "There is the utmost necessity for emotional understanding and adjustment in marriage, as they affect the happiness of the marriage relationship."

"Two people may be unusually companionable on the surface. They may like sports. They may enjoy tennis, boating, swimming, golf, and riding together. They may share their fondness for the theater. They may like to take long walks in the rain, and eat at midnight. Yet they may be unsuited to each other for marriage. There may be an entirely different tension when they come in close contact day after day. They may be delightful friends but unhappy in a personal relationship."

"The fact that an emotional adjustment can not be perfected easily quite probably means that the two people are wholly unsuited as partners in any sort of marriage. However, the two may need merely to understand themselves to perfect this adjustment. One thing is certain. They cannot rely on their mutual appreciation of sports and the theater as a marriage basis, important as a community of interest is, of course."

"Emotion is the most important part of any marriage. If emotion is removed from the relationship there is nothing left. However, you may take away all the other qualities which make up a person, but leave emotion, and the person remains complete."

LOVE, hate and fear are the three most powerful emotions. According to bi-plurality, love and hate for the same person may exist at the same time. A woman may love a man, and yet hate him for certain small irritating habits which he possesses.

"But there is a danger that the balance may swing in the wrong direction and hatred may surpass love. However, if a woman understands herself and understands her husband, she will recognize this emotional trend, analyze it, and overcome its possibility of danger. She will perfect a readjustment.

"Love and hate are two aspects of the same emotion. Hate is not the opposite of love. Indifference is, though."

"Let us draw a parallel line and call it electricity. One end of it is positive. That is love. The other end, which is negative, represents hate. When a woman doesn't have emotional understanding trifles may throw the weight from the side of love to that of hate."

This danger is avoided when two people are emotionally adjusted, the noted psychologist has discovered in her experience.

"Every act and word is a psychic betrayal. A woman may grow displeased with her husband because he smokes cigars which she dislikes or because he guzzles his soup. Her whole life may be wrecked by lack of emotional comprehension. A mere thought, brooded over too long, may result in divorce."

A PATIENT of mine was a splendid example of this. The woman had enrolled in a class which studied poetry. One day she read the line: 'Thou art mated with a clown.' Her first reaction was: 'That is just the situation that I'm in!'

"She retained the words, let them take hold of her mind, came to believe that they suited her own relationship. Her husband was a clown, she said. She knew now what she had always suspected. Eventually she left him."

"Had the woman been emotionally poised she would have known that this line, which caught her fancy, was an exaggerated view of her situation and she would have forgotten it."

Before the problems of marriage present themselves it is necessary to fall in love and have the loved party love back! The responsiveness of the person to whom you have been attracted depends pretty much on your own self-understanding, Dr. Elmore teaches.

"If you are a woman who wants to get her man, begin to work on the inside of yourself," she says. "You must be beautiful in spirit if not in form and figure. Even your form and figure can be made beautiful. You must have that inner harmony that aids beauty. Cosmetics do much to aid beauty, but they supply the outer structure."

"There are two groups of laws under which men and women live. First, there are the laws of the community group. Secondly, there are those which we make as individuals. If we have inner peace, if we understand ourselves, we will be able to project harmony into marriage. When we do this, a marriage will not go on the rocks."

SMALL annoyances will be relegated to an unimportant place in the marital curriculum.

A wife will not mind if her husband's neckties satisfy some need of his instead of her own good taste. She won't scold because his friends aren't social assets. He may prefer hot soup while she likes cold consommé, but that will be all right, too. Even if he buys movie tickets when her heart yearns for theater reservations, that won't be so important.

So long as a woman is mentally poised and calm, the one hundred and seven small disturbances of marriage will be purely exterior trifles.

"I had a patient come to see me who had divorced her husband," says Dr. Elmore. "She was not sure just why she had taken this step. She knew only that she had ceased to care for him. One day we were at dinner together. A man at a nearby table was eating soup vociferously. Suddenly the woman looked up."

"I can't bear a man who guzzles his soup," she said. Then, almost instantly, she added, 'but that wasn't why I divorced my husband.'

SHE had solved her problem. She admitted that her husband had this trait and that it was one which she could not endure. A little mental insight would have made her understand what was happening and put the incident in its proper place rather than magnifying it out of all proportion.

"Love is very natural," the woman who has investigated thousands of cases, explains. "One of the finest forms of love is the one which we find in marriage. There is nothing more splendid in all the world. Love is a trine. The emotion which governs the love period of life is a matter of mind, body, and spirit. Every part is important and should exist in life."

"However, if we could have only one of the three parts the physical would be the one that would hold. The mental and spiritual would not be so lasting. Anatole France married his cook and everyone wondered why he was so happy with her. It can be answered easily. The physical is the strongest hold. Some people live happily together even when they have no companionship."

"Creature comforts are most important in a home. A wise woman will endeavor to make it the most beautiful spot in the world. She will want it to be a place where her husband can bring his cares and responsibilities. There will be understanding waiting for him—comradely, sympathetic understanding."

UNDERSTANDING, after all, is love.

When a woman understands a man well, she can attract him. Her inner loveliness and sympathy will win him. If he has had an unhappy childhood her sympathy over his small-boy years will be genuine. If he had to start to work when he was eleven, she will understand and be sorry."

Dr. Elmore gives another incident of a woman's real charm and sportsmanship acting as a magnet. This maintenance of a sense of values and the unimportance of trifling embarrassments will help any woman.

A bridge game was in progress at a party. The players moved around from table to table, as their scores mounted. Winners went on and losers remained.

There was one woman who lost constantly. When the scores were added she was sitting at the table at which she had started. But even at that she had lost the booby prize, for somebody underscored her.

BUT she laughed about it, and was very charming," Dr. Elmore relates. "A man at the party decided that he would like to have a wife with the poise, sense of values, and charm which she revealed."

"A friendship began, and eventually he married her. He explained that he knew that she would make an excellent wife, when she met an embarrassing situation gracefully."

There is much to be said in favor of marriage in which the husband and wife have the same interests so far as work is concerned. Dr. Elmore believes. That and their interest in each other will carry them far.

"Marriage is a joint adventure, a shared experience," she explains. "Work is the greatest blessing which can befall anyone. Shared work almost invariably makes people happy, for they do it together."

"Nothing keeps people so happy as their interest in each other. Emotion, which is the driving factor in life, creates interest. As long as two people have it, they will love each other."

EMOTIONAL poise is necessary in this relationship for it makes people kind instead of antagonistic. There are those who quarrel to let off steam, and then are happy because they found relief. Their relationship is not injured by this state of affairs.

"Women must dress as prettily as they can, cultivate inner harmony, and be sympathetic. Then they will be fully able to win their men—and hold them!"

Not all that a man or woman is, can be told from the surface view. Not even when two people have continual contacts are the masks ever really lifted.

"The mind has two divisions," says Dr. Elmore. "The unconscious occupies eight-ninths of the mind and the conscious one-ninth. Imagine an iceberg, which is eight-ninths submerged under water. The unseen part is more dangerous than the seen."

Dr. Elmore believes that marriage clinics should be established in America as well as in foreign countries which are realizing this demand.

"The first marriage clinic ever established," she says, "was located in Vienna. It was financed by the state. If the prospective husband and wife could have help in understanding what love and the completion of love really mean, married life would be so much easier for them. The emotional readjustment and mental poise that would result would make them able to handle their love in an easy, graceful manner. The divorce rate would be lowered, and people would be much happier."

"And one of the primary principles that would be instilled into a girl's mind in the courses of advice would be that she must create a home. There is a poem which rings true that she should learn:

*"We may live without books,
What is knowledge but grieving?
We may live without hope,
What is hope but deceiving?
We may live without love,
What is passion but pining?
But where is the man Who can live without dining?"*

My Million Thrills, Battling Man-Killing Beasts

By MAJOR HOWARD S. REED, Famous Explorer and Big-Game Hunter—TODAY

LONE CRY

"Anadair," North-Siberian Sledge Dog, Typical of the Dogs That Drew Major Reed's Sledges Through Northern Wastes. Part Wolf, It Is Nevertheless Loyal to Man. Note Sharp Fangs Able to Deal with the Wild Wolves of Alaska.

A RACE against death in the far north—a man against a pack of wolves—is recounted in this installment of the experiences of Major Howard S. Reed, famous explorer and big-game hunter. It is the story of a man who has, during the course of thirty years, faced terrible danger in the jungles and other wild places of the world uninhabited by man.

By MAJOR HOWARD S. REED

NIGHT had fallen swiftly. The cold stars came out. The moon cast a pale, frozen light upon the landscape. The wolves were gaining on me. Looking back now and then I could see them in the faint light of an Arctic night. They were shadows against the snow, racing shadows—gaining, always gaining, closing in on me despite all I could do.

Major Howard S. Reed, Famous Explorer, Big-Game Hunter and Collector of Specimens for Museums

It was one of the most thrilling experiences I ever encountered, there in the frozen fastness of Alaska. At the time I was after specimens of white big horn sheep—Ovis Dalli—and had selected a little known section of Alaska for my explorations.

Al, my partner, had been a prospector, packer, trapper, boatman and guide. We had reached one of those curious villages on the Klauhne River, a hundred miles west of the Yukon, after a hard trip with the dog sledge. It was a village whose population is a strange mixture of northern Indians and Eskimos.

It was pleasant in the village after our long trek. Al and I were glad of the chance to rest for a few days. We had used up all our strength during various bear hunts. Chita, the daughter of the village Indian chief, made the rest more pleasant for me than it would have been. She was the tallest Indian girl I have ever seen and also the most beautiful.

She was the pride of the chief, the pride of the village. She could shoot, she could trap, she could catch more fish through the ice than anybody else. She could make things with her hands, she could read and write and she could talk. Most of the Indian girls are shy, bashful, untalkative. Perhaps Chita had been like them before she went to school.

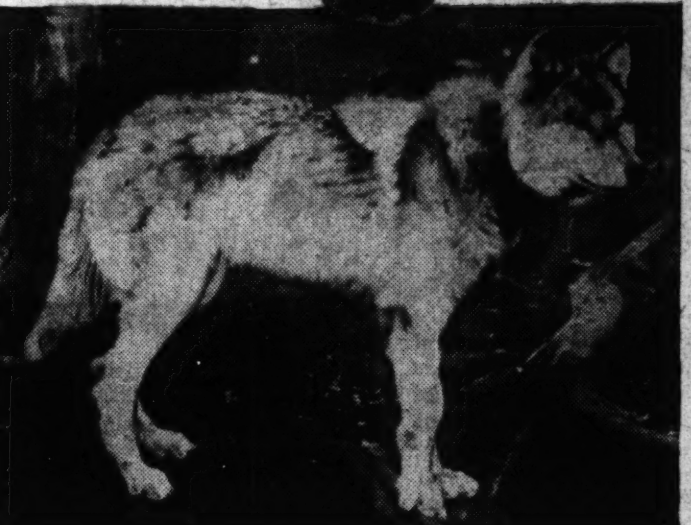

Perhaps I sound sentimental but I do not deny the thought. I recall, for instance, that I asked her to go out with me and shoot rabbits. Now that is not, you might say, a sentimental occupation. To be harshly practical, I wanted the rabbits for dog meat.

Chita was excited about all this and agreed to accompany me. But this is where the sentimental mood came in; we made an arrangement whereby, if I shot more rabbits than she did, she should kiss me. If she shot more, I should kiss her. So you see, I couldn't lose. Only one thing bothered me. It so happened that I shot more rabbits and she insisted upon kissing me in Eskimo fashion—by rubbing noses!

Well, after a few days Al and I set out on a hunt for the white horn sheep. In another article I shall explain some of the unexpected encounters we had with a more vicious animal—the bear. It was a matter of constant climbing over snow-driven mountains and Al, I noticed, seemed quite exhausted.

One day, for instance, we were perspiring from our climb up a mountain. It had been a mild morning and we had come up the mountain at a fast pace. Now the weather was changing. The perspiration that had soaked through our heavy mackinaws was changing into steaming frost.

THE sheep were drifting ahead of a storm, we noticed. They were working their way along in our direction. We crouched behind some rocks, waiting until the sheep should come within shooting range. The wind was piercing cold by this time and it was growing stronger every minute. But there was nothing we could do but wait.

Al suddenly shouted and shot a ram, but it dropped over a cliff. We started back. Al was plainly suffering from a chill. That night he began choking up and I knew he was due for a siege of pneumonia. And in the high altitude pneumonia, I realized, would probably be fatal.

The next morning Al could scarcely breathe. I went out with an axe. I walked to a little stream below camp, chopped a hole in the ice and fished around until I had found a thin flat stone. I went back to the tent, and put the stone in the fire. When it was heated enough I moistened a woolen blanket strip, wrapped it around the stone and put the steaming woolen on his chest.

I hoped it might send the blood fast through his lungs. But the altitude was against me. I watched him die all that day and night—delirious, talking of gold rushes, claim jumpers, crying for a girl he had left in Norway.

Yet I kept heating the rock that day, that night, steaming him, trying my best to clear his lungs. But it was of no avail. He died there, in his sleeping bag, on the frozen ground.

So I started back, five hundred miles from the village, with my partner lashed on my sled. Near him were three sets of the horns and heads of sheep I had bagged.

YOU may say: why not have buried Al there in the snow? So far as adventurers of the northland are concerned that would be the happiest fate—to be buried in the bleakness where one had toiled and struggled and died. But it is an unwritten law of the Yukon that when two men set out alone into the wilderness, and one of them dies, the other must come back with the body.

You see; there had been so many men murdered by greedy or revengeful partners, so many men had "disappeared," so many men who had come back alone, with provisions for two and plenty of gold—gold that need not now be shared—do you see? This unwritten law must, absolutely must, be observed strictly by honest men.

It was midwinter now. The caribou and other wild game had gone to the lower Yukon valleys for food. The sheep were clinging to the highest mountain ranges. And hungry wolves were slinking through the timber.

I was within a day's travel of the village on my way south when I heard the first faint cry of a wolf. I wish I could describe it to you. It is something like the cry of a human being in pain. It is the cry of an animal, eternally bewildered by the desolation about him, crying for what may be, for all I know, a lost paradise. The growls and roars of other wild beasts cannot quite equal the cry of the wolf.

But when this natural cry of the wolf is mixed with the cry of hunger it is terrible and blood-chilling. You feel as though all Nature was focusing its anger and despair and terror into a single voice.

At first I paid no attention to the cry of the wolf. Not that, until the cry came closer. That cry echoed and re-echoed, went rolling across the snow-covered hills, bounded back from the trees. Other cries answered—cries, by God, that were not echoes!

I knew. I knew! The lone hunter was calling his pack—as crows call to their fellows when the need arises.

"Mush on!" I shouted to the dogs.

There was only one hope for escape. I could not stand and fight a wolf pack. Had the man on the sledge been alive, I should not have worried. Two men can stand off many wolves, standing back to back. But one man alone will be surrounded in a moment, even though backed against a tree, his fight is hopeless.

LOST FRIENDS
A Photo of "Al," Major Reed's Partner in the Alaskan Wilderness, Who Died During a Dangerous Trek. With Him You See Two of the Major's "Bear" Dogs. How They Saved His Life Is Told in This Article.

My only chance of escape lay in the speed of my dogs.

"Mush on!" I shouted again and again. They strained with every ounce of energy in them. I quickened my own pace, running behind the sledge, guiding it, shoving it, whipping on the dogs. The whip crackled in the cold air, the dogs barked furiously and pushed on.

Now night was coming on. It fell swiftly as the stars came out. The shadows of the racing wolves became spectres of horror. I, who had faced tigers, jaguars, cougars, snakes and other fearsome denizens of the jungle, was in peril of my life. For once I was panic-stricken.

But panic-stricken or not there was but one thing to do—mush on!

My only haven of safety was the Indian Eskimo village ahead. That loomed closer as the time. It was now a question as to which would win the race—my dogs or the wolves.

Down a slight hill we flew, making no noise. Up a slight rise, toiling, panting, desperate, and ious. By "we" I mean the dogs also, for keep in mind that it was as desperate a race to the dog as it was to me.

Soon the lights of the village gleamed before me.

I shouted and fired my gun.

All the dogs of the village began to bark. Men rushed out—men and women and children too—armed with guns, shouting, rushing to my rescue. The wolves, now almost upon me, slunk away in terror. Noise and numbers always terrify the wolves. But not all of them got away. The people of the village kept pouring hot lead into them.

Let me say that that experience frightened me badly. I am not ashamed to say so. I have never been so close to death as I was that night. It was the only time in my life that wolves have ever followed me. Years later, in Malaysia when I was chased by wild dogs, I remembered the gray wolves of Alaska, and I laughed at the wild dogs.

Well, anyhow, I stopped overnight with my friends, Chief Izak and his family and in the morning of the second day I started to White Horse, across the ice of Klauhne Lake—the lake of the big fish.

It was two o'clock in the morning when I got up and harnessed the dogs. I had to travel twelve miles to a point on the lake, a clump of tall trees which would give me my bearings. From these trees I intended to go, at an angle forty-six miles across the ice to a cleft in the ridge—the only passage through the ranges that bordered the lake.

I ran along easily under the stars and the moon. In those days I could run all day and all night behind a sledge, and not feel tired. I loved it. I recommend the sport to anyone and promise it will make a new man of him.

The light of the stars faded as I started out from the clump of trees and a long "haloooooo" came across the ice to me. I looked and saw camp fire on the shore and three men standing near it. I stopped with a quick command to the lead dog and a sudden grip on the handles, swung the sledge toward the fire.

"Where you bound?" one of the men asked me. They were white men, sourdoughs, old

TERROR IN THE NORTH

"The wolves were upon me. There was only one hope for escape. But as I neared the village the dogs began to bark. Men rushed out—men, women and children, too—armed with guns, rushing to the rescue. The wolves, now almost upon me, slunk away in terror."

prospectors, bearded as I was, bundled up in shapeless furs.

"White Horse," said.
"Mind if we drop in behind you?"
"Not if you hurry," I said. "Storm coming."
They looked at the sky and nodded. They piled their stuff onto their sleds, tied it and started out. They were going to spend the winter in the States it seemed. They had been "inside" for seven years and were a bit tired of the cold country.

I WAS glad to have their company. It is not pleasant to travel with a dead man day and night, week after week.

"We've never been over this trail," they explained.

"It's good I came along, then," I said, not meaning to boast. "There's only one little rift in the mountains leading to this lake. If you don't go directly to it you may wander around the lake for days and see nothing but your own tracks."

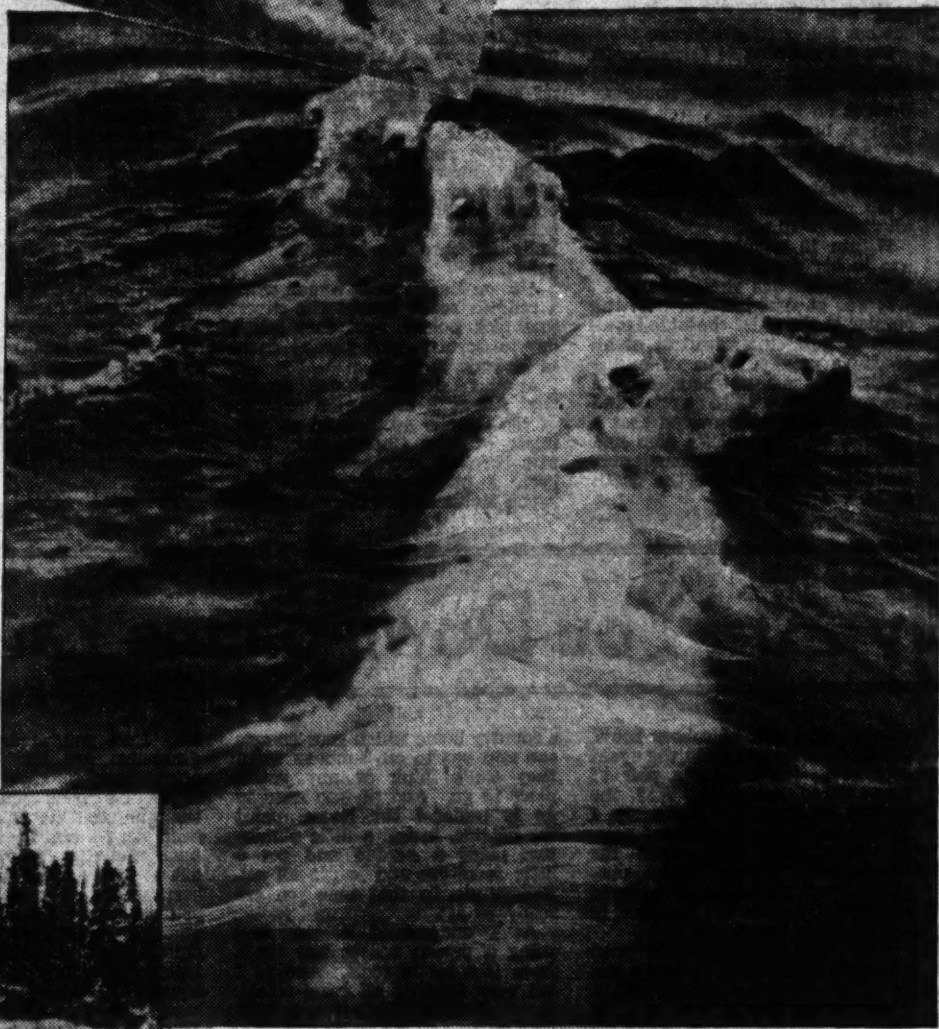

We had been but an hour on our way when the wind began to whistle through those mountains. We were half way across when the wind turned into a gale, hitting us on the left side, ing us off our course. The dogs tried to pile together against the cold and the piercing wind. I whipped them on.

It was too cold to snow but the wind picked all the loose snow from the ice and blew it into us, blew it through the thick hair of the dogs, into their skin. The snow came in blinding stinging clouds, sweeping the ice clear.

By now my clothes were thick with snow. There were icicles hanging from my moustache, icicles made of my breath, icicles that barred me from eating. I couldn't break them to shove a piece of hardtack through them. Tell that to Ripley if you want to, but it is the truth!

While we kept moving through the immensity of snow and ice one thing was uppermost in my mind. I was thinking of the tales Chief Izak had told me of the enormous brown bears of the region. In anticipation of meeting them I had into a frenzy of anger toward man. I was aware of that but I figured that if we stayed close enough to the lake we would not have to worry about mama bear.

But as I was sitting on an improvised stool, cleaning my gun, I heard a low growl. I turned and there was a huge brown bear approaching me. My gun, naturally, was not loaded and I knew I would not have time to load it before the animal would be upon me.

Slowly I retreated toward the lake, hoping that I might be able to get on the ice before the bear had reached me. It seemed a flimsy hope, that brown animal came steadily toward me, growling.

two airdales. They were the nerviest and grittiest dogs I could find. They were ready and willing to fight anything.

Others had told me that they had never seen any dogs that could stop the big brown bears of the Klauhne, but this day my own reliance upon the dogs was justified.

We had been moving across the lake painfully and had drawn up to the shore at last. One of the soundpugs in the party behind me now sighted a cub bear and immediately opened fire. I was furious about it, but of course I had no authority over the men. The cub died instantly—but the incident was not ended.

I do not need to tell you, of course, that the death of a cub bear can drive the mother bear

It paused for a moment, facing me, then charged. I turned and fled, knowing that the only thing left to do would be to make for the open. But I didn't have much time. The bear was rushing after me and then, about ten feet away from me something happened.

The two airdales, who had been unhitched from the sled to rest, had come upon the scene, observed the situation, leaped into action. They pounced upon the bear, snarling, barking all the time.

The bear lashed out its paws furiously and finally knocked down one of the dogs. Yet the other alone, continued to charge at the bear biting into it, jumping nimbly all about it.

TRUE, the bear wasn't badly injured by the encounter. But the admirable and courageous work of the two dogs gave me time to load my rifle.

Suddenly, as the second airdale was charging, the bear struck a terrific blow that laid the dog low. Then, without hesitation, the beast charged for me. But by that time my rifle was ready. I fired three quick shots and mama bear fell to the ground dead.

Now our fix was serious indeed. The blizzard was unabated—we were off our course, perhaps lost—the sled held a corpse, and one of my dogs was injured! I took the poor animal in my arms and stretched out flat on the ice, warming it as best I could. I can pay no higher tribute to the courage and vitality of that airdale than to state that after a time he recovered—stood groggily up—and shaking off the effects of the bear's awful blow was able to be hitched again to the sled and toil onward over the snow.

And our luck wasn't over, for through sheer sense of direction I found the cleft in the ridge and the pass leading down to White Horse. I had kept the unwritten law and my troubles were ended.

But whenever I recall the matchless bravery of those airdales in tackling the mother bear, and the courage of the hurt animal in helping haul us to safety after that, I remember, too, another dog of this breed who was with me when he stepped into a bear trap. His right foreleg was broken close to the shoulder. That night the wounded leg, with no circulation, froze as hard as a board.

The next day, hobbling behind us in a storm, he vanished and I gave him up for lost. But at the end of three days after that, into the Indian village he limped—with only three legs! He had evidently amputated the broken limb himself.

Christmas Presents from Paris

ONE advantage of last-minute gifts: they certainly can be up to date! Here are some of Paris' day-before-yesterday creations in a wide range of taste and cost.

Would you give jewelry? Then be original—select Dilkusha's heavy copper belt, touching up a simple gown at the upper left; or Marcel Rochas' necklace of white enameled fleurs de lys; or Heim's mirth-provoking green enameled birdcage worn around the neck on a black silk cord; or Maggy Rouff's barbaric gold bracelet at the left.

Would you give accessories? What about Schiaparelli's black chenille chin veil, Maggy Rouff's yard-and-a-half wool scarf or handkerchiefs with name embroidered from end to end? Then there is Max's short monkey fur cape and Aileen Rice's scarlet jersey blouse.

Smith has a memo pad which really fills the bill; it has space for morning, luncheon, afternoon, dinner and evening appointments, with a division for names of those who called while you were out. Lucien Lelong contributes a navy and red scarf-handkerchief set guaranteed to put dash into any suit costume. And look at Heim's white ermine hand-bag muff!

They are all illustrated on this page—you'll find them if you look—with purses, gloves, cigarette cases, clip earrings, lingerie, scarf-pins, Swedish candles, muffs and fur capes as well. No excuse for lack of originality in those gifts you dash out to get on Christmas Eve!

Major Howard S. Reed, one of the world's outstanding big-game hunters, who has bagged everything from cougars to polar bears and has killed more tigers than any other man in the world, vividly sets forth in today's Constitution Magazine, a race against death, a battle with hungry wolves in the fastness of northern Alaska. The special Christmas package with 4 boxes of Camel "fat fifties"—just the inexpensive gift you've been wanting.

● Cigarettes for Christmas! No smoker ever has too many. But which cigarette? Remember that the brand you give reflects your own good taste... your sense of discrimination. That's why we suggest Camels. They are made from finer, more expensive tobaccos than any other popular brand. They are the choice of distinguished men and women in every field of the social and business worlds. And their finer tobaccos bring that welcome "lift" in energy—that warm good cheer—which is after all—Christmas!

● Is there a pipe smoker on your Christmas list? Then your problem's solved. He's made it easy. Give him long evenings of calm contentment. Give him the sheer joy of ripe, mellow tobacco—cool and mild and bite-less. Give him Prince Albert... "The National Joy Smoke." What a man spends his own money for is what he really likes. And more men spend their money for Prince Albert than for any other pipe tobacco.
